WENATCHEE, Wash., Oct. 5.—(AP)—Skidding to a dizzy stop, Clyde Pangborn and Hugh Herndon landed their wheelless plane here today to complete the first non-stop airplane crossing of the Pacific ocean from Japan.

The American barnstorming aviators made one of the most dangerous ocean hops ever attempted, flying nearly 4,500 miles in 41 hours and 13 minutes from Samushiro Beach, Japan, to Wenatchee.

Edging his way through the crowd at the field, a Japanese newspaper reporter handed the fliers a $25,000 check, issued by a Tokyo newspaper, for the first successful non-stop flight between Japan and the United States.

"Very glad to see you boys," he shouted.

Herndon and Pangborn were in their stocking feet as they climbed from the plane.

To lighten their load, the aviators had dropped their landing gear soon after taking off from the Japanese island at 5:01 p. m. (E. S. T.) Saturday. They smashed their propeller and Herndon received a nasty gash over his eye. The plane jolted to the ground here at 7:14 p. m. (P. S. T.), 10:14 o'clock (E. S. T.).

Dangers of Flight Described by Herndon

WENATCHEE, Wash., Oct. 5.—We're back again in the U. S. A. we "hard luck" boys, Clyde Pangborn and I. But it's good luck for us at last. For we are the very first ever to have flown an airplane across the Pacific ocean non-stop from Japan to the United States.

Our experiences since we left Long Island so long ago to circle the globe would fill a book. Sometimes, perhaps, they will. But now, speaking for both Clyde and myself, I'll confine myself to the flight we completed this morning, that long jump over the Pacific "back home."

And here goes, from the very beginning.

The morning of September 29, at 4:30 o'clock, we arrived at Tachikawa, Tokyo's airport, which is situated 25 miles from the city. We swung the ship around to adjust our compass, but this operation did not help any, for although the Japanese had compass points laid out on the ground, they were not true.

No one seemed to know whether the points were true or magnetic.

At 10 a. m. we took off for Samushiro beach, less than 300 miles from Tokyo, but actually it was more than 400 the way the Japanese routed us. We were forced to fly well out to sea and travel the entire distance away from land, due to their reasoning, perhaps, that we might see some more of their fortifications, or, as we think, the places where their forts should be, but are not.

Without running the motor very fast, we made the record time of 3 hours and 15 minutes between Tokyo and Samushiro.

We discovered the beach there to be a natural runway about a mile and a half long, but very rough from the last half on. A wooden ramp had been built on a sand dune at one end to give a heavy laden ship its initial momentum. This was previously erected for Broomey, Gatty, Asher, Allen and Moyle, but we found it too wide for our eight-foot trend and made the fishermen at Samushiro mow it. The ramp was made of 2 by 12 inch.

COUNCIL DELAYS FINANCE ACTION, HITS DONATION

Special Meeting Called for Friday on Fiscal Sheet; To Ask Power Company for Advance.

After having sidestepped consideration of the October finance sheet until a special called meeting at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon, council Monday, by a vote of 30 to 1, went on record as opposing any salary donation from city employees to assist in meeting the fiscal crisis of the government.

When Alderman J. Charlie Murphy, chairman of the finance committee, offered the October budget carrying appropriations amounting to more than $11,000,000 for the entire year, and having $382,000 included, which Murphy "doubted to be legal," several members of council assailed it. As council deferred action on the finance sheet, Mayor James L. Key signed October 1 pay rolls for teachers.

Dwight Morrow Dies At New Jersey Home

DWIGHT MORROW.

ENGLEWOOD, N. J., Oct. 5.—Senator Dwight W. Morrow died in his sleep today at the peak of a career which carried him into international prominence as a financier and diplomat.

He was 58 years old.

A secretary tried in vain to awaken Senator Morrow when he was found in his sleep today at the peak of a career which carried him into international prominence as a financier and diplomat.

Up to the time the funeral arrangements were announced, no word had been received from Colonel and Mrs. Charles Lindbergh, who are en route to Shanghai, China.

Mrs. Morrow was reported by members of the household to be bearing up well under the strain.

Nearly 300 friends called at the church, of which Dr. Carl H. Elmore is pastor. The place of burial has not been determined.

Members of the family likewise had not decided tonight whether the body would lie in state. No announcement was made as to whether the funeral would be public or private.

Up to the time the funeral arrangements were announced, no word had been received from Colonel and Mrs. Charles Lindbergh, who are en route to Shanghai, China.

Mrs. Morrow was reported by members of the household to be bearing up well under the strain.

GRAND JURY NAMES COLL, FOUR OTHERS IN BABY SLAYING

State Relies on Mysterious Witness in Fight To Punish Gangster for Harlem Outrage.

BY FRANK GERVASI.
NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—(AP)—The law clamped a first-degree murder indictment on Vincent Coll today less than 24 hours after the 23-year-old hoodlum chief had been arrested for the Harlem "baby killing" of last July.

Indicted with Coll was an underworld subordinate, Frank Giordano, reputed "trigger man" in the ruthless street shooting in which 5-year-old Michael Vengali was fatally shot and four other children wounded by a shower of slugs from an automobile filled with gangsters.

Three others, who were not named by the police, were indicted with Coll and Giordano.

"These prisoners are the baby killers," announced Assistant Chief Inspector John J. Sullivan as Coll, Giordano and three associates mounted a brilliantly lighted platform in the regular morning police "lineup."

Pierces Disguise.

The bright glare pierced a ludicrous disguise which Coll, rival of "Dutch Schultz" Eganheim, Bronx beer baron, had assumed. Coll had dyed his blonde hair black and had grown a scraggly mustache to which he had also applied a black dye.

"They are responsible for the shooting in East 107th street," Inspector Sullivan continued in strong tones. "We have information that each and every one of them was in the automobile at the time of the killing."

Police would not reveal the identity of the person who made the identification, fearing reprisal.

The gangsters and two women were rounded up by police and detectives last night.

With Coll, police who raided a Manhattan hotel, arrested Lottie Klieberger, alias Moran; Domenick Olierio and Betty White. Three others, Michael Basile, Pasquale Del Greco and Vincent Di Lucia were nabbed before the raid in another hotel. Lottie Klieberger professed to be Coll's wife.

"Coll showed what a coward he is last night," Inspector Sullivan said. "When detectives searched his room they found six cartridges and a revolver and allowed her to claim ownership."

"We knew very well it was his revolver, yet he said it belonged to a girl we found in the room. He said, 'I was alone and she came in and shot me.'"

Moves Swiftly.

Legal machinery moved swiftly and surely after the arrest.

Coll was arraigned in homicide court on a murder charge. Reports that rival gangsters planned to "rub out" Coll caused authorities to place heavy guards at the hearing.

Immediately after the hearing, Assistant District Attorney P. Francis Marmon appeared before the grand jury and in an hour had obtained the indictments.

Among those who appeared before the jury was the mysterious witness.

Coll was held without bail for examination October 15. Holding a hat before his face to balk photographers, Coll was led from the courtroom to a cell.

The arrests, police asserted, cleared up not only the Harlem baby slaying, but also eight murders of Dutch Schultz gangsters in the beer war for control of the Bronx, which culminated with the slaying Friday of Joseph Mullen.

Michael Basile and Pasquale Del Greco were held without bail for examination Wednesday on charges of robbery.

Shortly after Coll and Giordano were indicted by the New York county grand jury for murder in connection with the Harlem shooting, the Bronx county grand jury returned indictments against Giordano and Domenick Olierio for the murder of Joseph Mullen.

SHIBE PARK, PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5.—(AP)—The grizzled old warhorse of the mound, Burleigh Grimes, whose twirling arm was supposed to be creaking, came out with a two days' growth of beard today, held the Athletics to a pair of hits and pitched the Cardinals into the lead for the baseball championship of the world.

Witnessing World Series play for the third straight year, President Hoover was among nearly 33,000 spectators who saw Grimes come close to a masterpiece as he held the Athletics hitless for the first seven innings and beat them, 5 to 2, in the third game of a dramatic inter-sectional war.

Grimes was robbed of a shutout in the ninth inning when the mighty Al Simmons emerged from his slump to bang a home run over the right-field wall, with one on and two out, but the veteran spitballer subdued his old-time rivals with almost ridiculous ease up to this final gesture by the home forces.

WHITEHALL BRIDGE OFFER IS ACCEPTED

Grant's Proposal To Lend
City $30,000 Is Lauded;
County Aid Sought.

Council Monday afternoon moved to expedite reconstruction of the Whitehall street viaduct, built 30 years ago, and the only one of the old overhead steel girder type bridges left in the central business section.

An offer from John W. Grant, leading Atlanta capitalist and prominent civic leader, to lend Atlanta $30,000 for 15 months without interest, was accepted. Chief of Construction Clarke Donaldson was instructed to begin at once preparation of drawings and estimates to replace the old bridge with a handsome, deck-type bridge, and the entire matter was referred to the joint consideration of the finance and bridge committees of council.

In a written offer, Grant estimated cost of replacing the structure at $80,000, and said that while he knew one council could not bind another to repay any obligation, he would be willing to accept a resolution recognizing the claim as a "moral obligation" on the part of the city, and that he would advance $30,000 to enable the city to do the work at once. His plan anticipates that Fulton county commissioners will guarantee the remaining $50,000. City Bridge Engineer C. E. Kaufmann has estimated cost of replacement at $60,700 several months ago.

The resolution accepting the offer was presented by Alderman John Scott, chairman of the bridge committee, who praised Grant's liberal offer.

Key Lauds Offer.

Mayor James L. Key said that "Mr. Grant's offer was too fine a thing for the city to turn down. It was inspired by a desire to assist Atlanta in its present financial stress and also to provide work for unemployed as well as to provide the new bridge."

Key will seek one-third of the cost of replacing the structure from the State Highway department. The Georgia assembly passed statutes at its last session enabling the state to contribute to work in thickly populated areas.

"It would be a fine thing for the state, county and city to join in this project," Key said.

The grant offer is similar to ones accepted formerly by the city from Robert F. Maddox to purchase the site of the old city hall, and from the late Hugh T. Inman to provide funds for erecting a new water pump at the city waterworks. If it is accepted, the repayment would not be due until the spring of 1933.

In calling attention to the need for a new bridge, Grant said he hoped his offer would be accepted as he believed a "majority of the citizens of Atlanta."

BRITISH WILL CALL ELECTION AT ONCE

Liberal Group Pledges
Full and Unqualified
Support to MacDonald.

BY FRANK H. KING.
Associated Press Staff Writer.
LONDON, Oct. 5.—(AP)—The British cabinet decided unanimously tonight to call an immediate general election, it was announced authoritatively after a late session.

No formal official statement was given out at the close of the meeting, which lasted two hours, but it was learned that the election campaign will be fought by the national government on the basis of a manifesto to be issued by Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald.

The unanimity of the decision was taken to indicate that Sir Herbert Samuel and the other liberals whose attitude has been doubtful have thrown in their lot with the prime minister and will give him their whole-hearted support.

The cabinet's decision followed closely the announcement that a group of 22 liberal members of parliament, including Sir John Simon, had pledged their unqualified support to the prime minister.

Mr. MacDonald also visited David Lloyd George, veteran liberal leader, at his country home at Churt earlier today.

It was understood the prime minister's manifesto will ask for a free hand to deal with the British situation. It is expected to be "the doctor's mandate" which he already has declared to be necessary.

Nothing was known tonight about what attitude he will adopt regarding the tariff policy, but it was considered certain it would be one to which all of the sections forming the national cabinet could adhere.

Parliament will be prorogued Wednesday as was previously arranged and it is expected to be dissolved Thursday, in which case the election would take place October 28.

The official announcement on these matters will not be made, however, until Mr. MacDonald has conferred with King George, which he will do tomorrow.

The cabinet's decision came as a general surprise, especially since today's gossip emphasized an expectation that the cabinet would be disrupted following the prime minister's visit to Lloyd George.

The veteran liberal leader, it was said, warned MacDonald that it would be a grave mistake to call an election, describing such a step as "a perilous adventure" and assuring him that if an appeal to the country were decided upon he would advise the liberal party members to stand as independents, opposed to the government.

How well founded this gossip may be, however, is not known.

POST OFFICE WORK WILL START TODAY

Actual Construction To Get Under Way, Contractor Declares.

Actual construction of the foundation for the new terminal postoffice building on Spring street between Hunter and Mitchell, is slated to get under way this morning, according to John A. McDonald, president of the National Construction Company, which holds the contract for the work.

Mr. McDonald arrived in the city Monday and stated that a field office will be erected on the site at once, the working crews organized, the work started. He will use approximately 150 workmen, he said. The $250,000 contract, which his company holds, calls for the completion of foundation work and the building of a framed structure to connect the offices with the railroad depots. The contract for the superstructure will be awarded within the next few weeks, it was learned from Washington dispatches. Appropriation for the building, foundations and tunnel approximates $3,000,000.

HOOVER SUMMONS CONGRESS CHIEFS FAIR 'SCHOOL DAY'

President Seeks Advice of Both Parties in Effort
To Improve 'Times.'

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Seeking advice and support in his effort to hasten the coming of better times, President Hoover has summoned the leaders of congress to a round-table talk tomorrow night at the White House.

The invitation went to both republicans and democrats who hold the reins of party control in the evenly balanced senate and house. Today and tonight they were arriving hourly at the capital, uninformed of the exact nature of the conference, but ready to be of service.

This is the second time since congress adjourned that the chief executive has canvassed the sentiment of the legislative branch of the government. Before he announced his memorandum offer last June he consulted with many senators and representatives and pledged their support in advance.

During the last week he has received the opinions of various important figures in private as well as public life. His callers have included such official advisers as Secretaries Mellon and Lamont, and such financial leaders as Julius Barnes and Bernard Baruch.

These discussions have not yet reached the stage, however, where the White House considers that public disclosure would be in the national interest. It is expected generally that some statement will follow the conference of tomorrow night.

The invitations to the conference went out Saturday night, after Mr. Hoover had gone to his Rapidan camp for a Sunday's rest. Many were expected to arrive today.

CHILDREN MAKE THE MOST OF ANNUAL HOLIDAY 'Sports Day' Today.

With more ideal weather promised for today, the Southeastern fair at Lakewood park is expected to draw another huge crowd for 'sports day.'

Attendance Monday, when upward of 50,000 school children surged over the grounds, approached the 75,000 mark, fair officials said at check-up time.

Released for the day Monday the herds of children from Atlanta and many other cities and towns in the state took the fair by storm. It was their day and they went about celebrating it with more than ordinary enthusiasm. As early as 8 o'clock scattering crowds of small boys began to arrive and by noon the vanguard was inside the gates and in full possession of things.

A feature of children's day was the state championship spelling bee in the afternoon. The event was won by Miss Mildred Clark of Fulton High school, over a field of 27 other county champions from all parts of Georgia.

First prize award was $100.

In order that the grandstand attractions may be within the reach of everyone visiting the Southeastern fair, it was decided at a conference Monday night between President Lee Ashcraft and General Manager Oscar Mills to reduce the grandstand admission price for the entire week to the customary 50 cents to 10 cents. For the first time in the history of the fair the grandstand price was reduced to 10 cents Monday as an experiment, the result being a packed stand throughout the day, with standing room only part of the time. Mr. Mills has arranged exceptionally fine grandstand programs for every afternoon and the thrills of the motor boat races of Monday drew the cheers of thousands.

The perfect fall weather Monday attracted what was called one of the greatest second-day crowds in the history of the fair. The arrival of the Murphy Show Sunday added the finishing touch to the attractions already on hand.

Many in Grandstand.

First events in the grandstand Monday drew thousands of spectators. Motor boat and auto races, band concerts and vaudeville attractions were on the program.

Monday night thousands of visitors witnessed the fireworks display and more grandstand vaudeville attractions. The midway was a riot of activity with great crowds squirming through the main street and swarming inside tent shows. The crowd was out to have plenty of fun and judging by its hilarity and prevailing good humor, few failed to register the time of their fair experiences.

Sports day, today, will be featured.

Condition of Edison Shows Improvement

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Oct. 5.—(AP)—Thomas A. Edison today maintained the slight improvement noted in his condition after a six-hour sleep.

Charles Edison issued another bulletin at 10:30 p. m. as follows: "Mr. Edison has spent a quiet uneventful day and is now resting comfortably. There is on the whole no change for the better or worse in his condition."

William Meadowcroft, for 38 years personal secretary and assistant to the inventor, visited Edison today and conversed with him 15 minutes.

The slight change in Mr. Edison's health lifted to some extent the pall of anxiety which settled on his Lewellyn Park home over the week-end.

Harris Will Oppose Move for Sales Tax

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Opposition to a sales tax was expressed today by Senator Harris, democrat, Georgia, upon his departure from the capital for home.

"I am unalterably opposed," he said, "to increasing by 1 cent the tax on the farmer or laborer or any man whose income is barely sufficient to meet the necessities of life. For this reason I shall exert my every effort to prevent passage by congress of any form of sales tax."

Story of Morrow's Life, His Rise To Prominence

Notes—This is the first of a series of articles on the life of Dwight W. Morrow.

BY MARY MARGARET MCBRIDE.
(Copyright, 1931, by The Constitution, by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

"Alice is no longer our youngest," Dwight Whitney Morrow was one hour and 20 minutes old when, on January 11, 1873, this telegram was sent by his father from Huntington, W. Va., to relatives.

A telegram was then a rare luxury on a schoolmaster's income, but James Elmore Morrow, president of Marshall College, at Huntington, was impelled by his joy to indulge in the extravagance.

Dwight Whitney Morrow was named for William Dwight Whitney of Yale, famous author of a text book on English grammar. Until he was in his teens, Dwight was pale and undernourished, so much less robust than his brothers and sisters that many friends doubted he would grow up.

His determination not to be a weakling won. When he reached 13 he got stronger. Happily, he left all symptoms of ill health back with those younger years.

He was a simple, direct lad. There was in him that respect for others, that readiness to accept and share another's point of view, that was a heritage of frontier life.

The days of Dwight Morrow's village boyhood were in the straightened period, and the Morrow family life reflected times and traditions. Religious sentiment dominated. Sunday was strictly kept. It was a time of lowed and the children's playmates knew there was to be no visiting on Sunday.

Religious Tendencies.

At 12 Dwight joined the church in which his father was presiding officer. Family worship was held night and morning in the home. Dwight went always with older, bigger boys. He was three years ahead of most children and finished high school at 14, youngest in the class.

The year Dwight was graduated from high school those who attended heard the oration by a thin blond boy named Dwight W. Morrow. He was wearing a blue suit and a white shirt with a blue tie. He was the smallest of his class—but he had a surprisingly powerful voice and a clear, ringing tone. He was a graduate from many people thought most promising.

People used to speculate about what it was the boy had that made everything so sure he would succeed. He was always bright in a book, and he had no parlor tricks, unless, of course, one wanted to call his ability to play on the piano with one finger a tune called "Gospel Bells Are Ringing."

They usually decided it was his voice which made him seem smart—that, and the way he "looked out of his eyes." Anyway, it was generally thought the Morrow's second boy was going to be a public speaker, and his father dreamed that there might be a lawyer in the family.

The older son, Jay, was at West Point. Dwight's second boy was also small and young at the time of his graduation from high school that he knew there was no use trying to enter even a college for a year or so. In the meantime, he got a job at $4 a week in the county treasurer's office.

Wanted To Be Soldier.

At 17, Dwight decided he was ready for West Point. He took the examinations, and came out first. Then the congressman who had the appointment was reminded that there already was a Morrow at West Point. He said he would subject himself to serious criticism if he appointed the brother. So the top boy was passed over.

When the West Point plan failed, the question arose how this ambitious lad was to get the education he so desired. He had saved a little of his $4 wage and the family was willing to assist to help him. Even so, there would be a pitifully small amount for clothes, board and tuition.

Finally the father suggested there might be a chance to earn something toward expenses by tutoring other boys at Jefferson College. A letter of inquiry was sent to the college. The reply was favorable and Dwight began to prepare for the examinations.

He did very well in everything—too well, for he answered a question in geometry by working out an original problem. The assistant professor who was grading the examination gave him a bad mark, which barred him from Jefferson.

Professor Henry Gibbons, then a teacher of Greek at the college, was about to take a similar position at Amherst. He heard the story from Dwight's father and said: "Send the boy to Amherst. He will be an honor to any college."

Failed Examinations.

Arriving at Amherst, earnest, optimistic, very green, Morrow took the examination and failed in enough to bar him from entrance.

He passed all mathematical subjects 100 per cent, but was not so lucky in Greek, English and some other subjects. He would have been rejected had not Professor Gibbons assured the authorities this boy was worth keeping.

"He'll soon make those conditions up," the professor predicted.

And so Morrow entered Amherst with enough conditions to keep the average student out.

Dwight Morrow discovered near-by Smith College in his sophomore year. With all his conditions worked out, he had time for play. He was invited to a party at which a number of Smith girls and Amherst boys

Perhaps he had a headache, or maybe he was tired. Anyway, he found himself bored. He was meditating an unobtrusive departure when a friend introduced him to a small, blue-eyed, brown-haired girl.

For a moment he had been planning to leave and led the girl to a sofa. There the two sat the remainder of the evening, comparing notes about the college and the country.

Elizabeth Reeve Cutter, of Cleveland, freshman at Smith. In time she became Mrs. Dwight Morrow.

Among those at Amherst when Morrow was former President Coolidge, Justice Harlan F. Stone, United States supreme court; Bertrand H. Lunt, chairman of the rules committee; William C. Breed, former president of the New York Bar Association; and Herbert L. Pratt, chairman of the U. S. house of representatives.

In 1920-21, Morrow threw all his talent for organization and persuasion into raising an endowment of $3,000,000 for his alma mater. He gave large sums to its upbuilding, including a fund for a dormitory named after his father.

He was a most important still, he spent hours both as trustee and plain alumnus planning for the college, speaking for it and creating interest in it. Amherst was never out of his mind.

home to deliver personal messages of condolence.

The news of his death was intensified by its unexpectedness. The late-in-law of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, who was a partner in the Morgan banking house until he resigned to become ambassador to Mexico, appeared in excellent health last night as he addressed a large gathering at the New York hotel, where 1,200 men and women for his advice about welfare work.

The passing of the man who had poured oil on the troubled waters of Mexico by his doctrine of courtesy, patience and understanding between nations, removed one of the country's foremost advocates of prohibition against the use of force in international relations, and a possible candidate for president or vice president and a leader upon whom New Jersey republicans had expected to lean heavily in the turbulent campaign now being waged for the office of governor.

David Baird Jr., who stepped down from a temporary appointment to the senate in 1927, was a partner in the Morgan banking house until he resigned to become ambassador to Mexico, appeared in excellent health last night as he addressed a large gathering at the New York hotel, where 1,200 men and women for his advice about welfare work.

Death of Dwight Morrow Saddens Nation's Leaders

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Sorrow for the death of Senator Morrow was expressed last night in every quarter of the country.

Governor Roosevelt, of New York, who is vacationing at Warm Springs, Georgia:

"It is a misfortune for the state of New Jersey and for the United States senate the life of Mr. Morrow has come to an end at the height of his usefulness. The nation will always remember his services as ambassador to Mexico, which proved that sometimes the personality of one individual can do more than all the formal treaties in the world. I am personally deeply sorry to hear of his death."

The comments attested to the high place held by him in the eyes of his fellow men in Washington. Secretary Lamont called his passing "a tragedy."

In a telegram to Mrs. Morrow, Secretary Dusk said the late senator "was beloved for his personal qualities and admired for his staunchness in the advocacy of all things he felt to be right."

Other expressions follow:

Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, who served with Mr. Morrow on the London naval delegation: "I have known Mr. Morrow since boyhood. In my opinion, he was one of the ablest men in public life in this generation. His death is a great loss."

Senator Walsh, Montana: "Senator Morrow gave every evidence of becoming in a short time one of the most valuable and influential members of the senate."

Senator Pittman, Nevada: "I looked forward to his coming to the senate for economic discussions and decisions that must be made by the senate at the coming session. He will be deeply missed."

Representative Glenn, Illinois: "Senator Morrow's death is a very great loss."

Senator Hull, Tennessee: "The country will be deprived of his great talent and his unselfish devotion to the welfare of his country. He was one of the most outstanding persons in America in political, financial and economic affairs."

Representative Garner, Texas, the house democratic leader: "His death takes away an important figure in public life."

Representative Britten, Illinois: "The nation lost a very promising statesman."

Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and director of President Hoover's relief organization: "He devoted his great talents and ability unselfishly with a whole-hearted devotion to the welfare of his country. We have lost a great citizen."

Senator Borah, Idaho: "We can ill afford to be without his knowledge and his unselfish patriotism."

Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the finance committee, United States went to the senator's bedroom at 11 o'clock this morning and found him apparently sleeping soundly.

Mrs. Morrow was playing golf at a nearby country club when the news of her husband's death was brought to her. She hurried home from the links to find the senator dying. About half an hour before the end came a delegation of aviation enthusiasts appeared at the gate of the Morrow estate to keep a luncheon engagement which had been made several days ago.

Dr. Walter Phillips and Dr. Alvin Clark, of Englewood, and Dr. Nelson B. Foster, of New York, who were summoned by the senator's secretary, shook their heads when they arrived and said death was only a matter of a few hours.

At the senator's bedside were his wife, Miss Elizabeth Morrow, a daughter, Mrs. A. M. Scandrett, the senator's sisters and Mrs. Rebecca Greenhouse, a niece.

The first word of the senator's death was received here an hour after his passing in the form of an Associated Press dispatch from Meadville, Pa., saying the family had telephoned the news to a sister there. This dispatch became public even before Douglas Thomson, who managed Mr. Morrow's senatorial campaign, had been informed. Mr. Thomson was in Mr. Morrow's office in an Englewood bank building. He immediately telephoned the news to his home and then gave out a brief statement saying that Senator Morrow had died peacefully.

Cables were sent to Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh, who were aboard a British aircraft carrier on their way to Shanghai with the disabled plane from which they were thrown into the Yangtze river last week from the plane which they were flying.

Miss Constance Morrow, a daughter attending Smith College, and Dwight W. Morrow Jr., a student at Amherst, were notified. Mrs. E. J. McElvaine, of Meadville, Pa., a sister, was notified and started at once for Englewood.

Less than an hour after the news of the senator's death had been flashed around the world, messages of condolence began to pour into the Morrow home.

The first persons to arrive at the home after the death were Miss Constance Morrow, who is associated with her husband in the Englewood bank building, and Mrs. H. H. Elmore, pastor of the First Presbyterian church in Meadville, Pa.

Others who called during the afternoon were Thomas W. Lamont, with whom the senator had been associated for years in the Morgan banking house, and his son, Thomas S. Lamont; Charles E. Du Bois, president of the Western Electric Co.; Miss Alice Morrow, the senator's sister, and his brother, General J. J. Morrow.

Lamont and the senator were associated for years in the Morgan banking firm and were Englewood neighbors.

E. J. Sanders, secretary to the senator, said that the senator "passed away" as he locked his desk and departed for Englewood.

The Lindbergh's year-old son, who was with the Morrow family when the flying couple started on their journey to the Orient, was at the Morrow home in Maine.

The senator suffered a heart attack September 10 while attending a luncheon at the hotel where he was staying. After a short rest in bed he received a caller, with whom he conversed for two hours without mentioning his illness.

Only a week ago he attended the conference of the New Jersey congressional delegation at which a suggestion was made that the senate be reorganized by a special session of congress.

After the session he held a reception for the 6,000 persons who attended.

The senator reviewed the 104th regiment of engineers of the New Jersey national guard.

Leaders of the New Jersey legislature were in conference in Trenton yesterday when the news of the senator's death was received. They immediately announced preparing unemployment relief measures for introduction at a special session of that body tonight.

The senator's death was a great loss to the nation. He was a man of great ability and unselfish devotion to the welfare of his country.

His death threatened republican control of the senate. He was a member of the American delegation to the armaments conference next year and League officials expressed sorrow at the news of his death.

CAPONE'S TRIAL TO OPEN TODAY

Satellites of Gang World
Subpoenaed by Government as Witnesses.

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—(AP)—The government's big artillery was trained tonight on "Scarface Al" Capone.

At the hour of 9:30 Tuesday morning the major offensive will start, and the firing is aimed to carry into prison the wealthiest gangster of them all—and with him into disruption the gang system that has defied government for a decade.

For the first time Al Capone will face a jury.

For the first time United States District Attorney George E. Q. Johnson will direct actively the prosecution of the gang lord on the charge that he evaded income tax collectors who tried to collect $25,280 taxes on an alleged six-year income of $1,038,654.

And this time the gangsters who "never talk" may be ushered into the witness stand to testify against their chief, to tell for the first time the operations of his liquor, vice and gambling syndicates, the hidden sources of his fabulous income.

It will be no public show. The government has seen to that. Some 40 or 50 newspapermen have their tickets to watch the drama and tell the public about it. A few attorneys, bailiffs, witnesses, will occupy the courtroom of Judge James H. Wilkerson. But the public is barred.

Book and cast of this play that the government intends to make a final showdown with the gang system have been kept a secret by the prosecution and the staff of "untouchable" internal revenue bureau men who dug up the masses of evidence. But the players, hinted in the subpoenas known to have been issued, may include such satellites in the Capone world as Johnny Torrio, father of "Scarface Al" and his predecessor as general manager of illicit traffic in Chicago; "Two-Gun Louie" Alterie, who found western ranching safer than the streets of Chicago for a gunman; Fred Rizer, who helped convict Ralph Capone of tax dodging and then was hidden away in South America for safe keeping until needed again; Louis La Cava, Frankie Pope, and Sam Guzik.

(Muzik, a federal prisoner at Leavenworth, brought home to talk against his old boss.

One hundred witnesses were called today and those who had good reason for dismissal or were obviously unfit to serve were discharged. It is anticipated the selection of a jury will require no more than a day.

Safe conduct of Capone and witnesses to and from their hotels and homes during the trial has been guaranteed by government and police.

Representative Garner, the democratic house leader, feaches Washington today by airplane. He left his home in Uvalde, Texas, Sunday morning, and stopped over last night at Dayton, Ohio. Like several others among the assembling leaders, he expects to be able to leave again for home on Wednesday.

Several of the republican house leaders already were here when the summons reached them. Others, including Representative Snell, of New York, will arrive tomorrow. The conference will not meet until 9 p. m., allowing those from a distance sufficient time for a long day's travel.

Both Senator Watson, of Indiana, and Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, respectively republican and democratic leaders of the senate, are understood to be en route from their homes. Senator Glass, of Virginia, a former democratic secretary of the treasury, already is here. So are Senators Walsh, of Montana, the assistant democratic leader, Reed, of Pennsylvania, Harrison, of Mississippi, and others.

The messages from the White House merely said that consultation was sought on a matter of national importance. The recipients were urged to be present if at all possible.

GRIMES WINS THIRD FOR ST. LOUIS NINE

An assignment that was given to young Paul Derringer, with unfortunate results for the Cardinals. The spitballer, they said, had not been up to his old form the latter part of the season. He never looked better than he did this afternoon as he gained revenge for two heart-breaking defeats in the 1930 series.

Mixing his spitball with a fast curve and change of pace, pitching smartly all the way, Grimes was in sight of the all-time goal—a no-hit World Series game—when he completed seven innings without allowing the semblance of a hit. In that span only two Mackmen had reached base, on walks, and in six of the seven innings only three batters faced the veteran.

Grimes was especially wary of Jimmy Fox, whose home run beat the veteran in the fifth game of the 1930 series. He walked Fox for the second straight time to start the eighth and then Bing Miller broke the spell with a line single to center field. It was the first real threat by the A's, but old Burleigh, shifting his tobacco and hitching up his trousers, retired the next three batters in order, including Cramer, pinch hitting for Grove.

There were two out in the ninth when Cochrane, after a long duel with Grimes, received a pass. Simmons, whose only previous hit in the series was his homer in the opening game, then hit a fast ball and whalloped it over the right field barrier. Eric McNair, pinch-running for Cochrane, came in ahead of Simmons. Fox was fanned as the final victim, however, and Grimes walked off the field with his first World Series victory since he pitched for Brooklyn against Cleveland in 1920.

Sixth of Kind.

Burleigh's two-hit stunt was the sixth of its kind to be recorded in a World Series fray. The first was achieved by Ed Walsh, of the White Sox, in 1906, and the last by Walter Hoyt, then with the Yankees, in 1921. The closest to a perfect game in series

Monday was children's day at the annual Southeastern Fair and the photograph above shows only in part just how much the school children of Atlanta and Fulton county made the most of their opportunity to view the various exhibits and take in the sights. In the lower photo, Wendell Levi, noted pigeon judge, is displaying a prize bird to three interested onlookers, Christine Hill, Estell Theabart and Alice Slaughter. Staff photos by Sandy Sanders.

ries annals was Ed Reulbach's one-hit triumph for the Cubs over the White Sox in 1906.

The Cardinals, in fighting their way into the lead, gained this advantage for the first time since they turned the trick themselves in 1926 against the Yankees. The Red Birds flew off with the world championship that year and they are now suddenly installed as favorites to repeat.

The Cards hit the great Grove no harder today than they did last Thursday but their blows were more timely. They have now conquered the twin aces of the Mack staff, Earnshaw and Grove.

It wasn't Grove's day. Whether the blister on one of his pitching fingers bothered him or not—and Mack said afterward it didn't—the famous southpaw lacked his usual fine control. He started his own downfall in the second, by passing Jim Bottomley, and he couldn't do much the rest of the day with the bottom half of the Cardinal batting order.

Pepper Martin's single on his first turn at bat sent Bottomley to first and the first baseman scored on Wilson's single to right. Martin scampered to third and came home on Gelbert's long fly to Bing Miller.

New Outbreaks.

After a brief lull, the Cardinal attack broke out again in the fourth. Chick Hafey led off this time with a single to center and galloped to third as Martin pumped a double against the ball in right center. Dykes retired Wilson. Gelbert fanned but Grimes lashed a single to right that sent both runners tearing home.

Old Burleigh was fighting his pitching rival at the plate as well as the A's on the field. He sought to upset the southpaw by stepping out of the box as Grove started a windup. He engaged in a running fire of repartee with his 1930 foe, Mickey Cochrane.

Late in the game, Grimes had worked so hard that he developed a "crick" in his neck and had to go under the stands for a brief massage. Again, in the ninth, Burleigh's pitching hand was bruised by a drive from Hoax but, it was after this mishap, of which the pitcher deflected the ball to Gelbert for the throwout, that Grimes passed Cochrane and tossed the home run ball at Simmons.

Grimes turned back five of the Mackmen on strikes. It ran the total strike outs for the Cardinal fingers up to 24 for three games.

Leroy Mahaffey made his first appearance in the box for the Athletics in the ninth. He was wild, passing Jake Flowers to start with. Roettger forced Flowers and Frisch was thrown out on a fine play by Dykes, but Bottomley crashed a double against the scoreboard, scoring Watkins, running for Roettger, with the final Cardinal tally.

MEETING CHANGED.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Enough votes have been received from the board of governors of the Amateur Athletic Union, voting by mail, to transfer the scene of the next general meeting November 15, 16 and 17 from Miami Beach, Fla., to Kansas City. Daniel J. Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the A. A. U., announced the result today. The move to a central location was made in the interests of economy.

HARRELSON'S CHARGES BRING COUNCIL CLASH

Councilman Wells Heatedly
Defends City's Purchase of Traffic Stop Signs.

School Commissioner J. Ira Harrelson's answer to council's demand that he substantiate charges of graft he hurled at the body consumed nearly an hour of the session Monday afternoon and ended when Councilman James L. Wells, chairman of the traffic committee, of council, branded as "a liar" any one who says purchase of street stop signs were not "made ethically."

Harrelson sent a letter from a stop sign representative complaining that in buying the present signs the traffic committee of council had wasted $45,000 this year, called Alderman G. Everett Millican "hatchet-faced Every" and dubbed him Mayor James L. Key's "good man Friday."

Millican struck back at Harrelson for failure to pay street taxes until two years ago.

"I want to rise to a point of personal privilege," Wells said. "The stop signs we have bought this year were bought by the entire committee. If anyone says, or even intimates, that they were not purchased ethically, or for the best interests of Atlanta, he is a plain liar. That's all I have to say."

Suggested

REGULATIONS GOVERNING THE RETURN OF MERCHANDISE

offered to the Atlanta Public by the RETAIL MERCHANTS ASS'N

EFFECTIVE OCTOBER 1ST

As previously announced in the newspapers, it has become necessary in the interest of better business conditions in Atlanta to offer suggestions which we hope will reduce the amount of merchandise returned for credit and will be accepted in the spirit in which they are offered.

There is no intention to enforce rules to prevent the rightful privilege of returning merchandise for credit or exchange for a justified reason.

The object is to minimize the UNJUSTIFIED RETURN OF MERCHANDISE, which has resulted in unnecessary increase of expense, and ultimately acts to the disadvantage of the entire shopping public.

It is the desire of all the merchants to ask you to do only such things that will ultimately result in direct economies and benefits to both the consumer and to the merchants. Please make your selections more carefully and avoid unnecessary RETURNS.

There are some things which for your own protection should never be returned for sanitary and other personal reasons. This list is as follows:

- | | |
|---|--|
| (a) Bedding and mattresses. | (i) All fabrics cut from the piece. |
| (b) Garments that have been altered for the purchaser. | (j) Articles of wearing apparel which touch the body should they have been worn. |
| (c) Corsets and brassieres. | (k) All merchandise which has been made to order or specially ordered and which is not carried regularly in stock. |
| (d) Shoes which have been altered. | (l) No article should be offered for return unless it is in its original condition. |
| (e) Combs, hair brushes and tooth brushes. | (m) No merchandise of any kind which has been used should be offered for credit. |
| (f) Hair goods, hair ornaments and veils. | |
| (g) Rubber goods sundries. | |
| (h) Women's hats which have been made specially to the customer's order, or which have been worn. | |

Please try and bring back the salescheck to save both your time and ours.

If you find it absolutely necessary to return something, please return it promptly—surely within one week. The longer merchandise stays out of the store, the less it is worth to the store.

More careful, thoughtful shopping to overcome the bad habit which the merchants themselves have taught you is the one thing the purchasing public can do to help to bring about a speedy return of better business conditions than are now enjoyed.

Circuit and District Courts Open Fall Terms Here

Downer Case Argued Before Appeals Body; Underwood Asks More Law Enforcement.

Court activities at the postoffice building picked up with a snap Monday morning, as the federal district court began its criminal calendar for its fall session. The criminal calendar was set for the first day of the term, and the circuit court of appeals began its October term with all five judges present.

The fifth United States circuit court of appeals began its term by taking under submission all cases set for the Monday calendar, to make decisions later. Of this number, the largest was dismissed for lack of prosecution, it being that of Najib Jibril versus J. H. Wallis, district director of immigration, who had been arrested by Judge Nathan P. Bryan, of Jacksonville, senior circuit judge; Rufus E. Foster, of New Orleans, and Richard W. Walker, of Huntsville, Ala. The other two judges present, who will officiate from time to time, were Judge Samuel H. Sibley, of Marietta, and Judge Joseph C. Hutcheson, of Houston, Texas.

The principal feature of the day's hearing was the case of John Downer, Elberton negro, in an appeal for habeas corpus. He is under the death sentence for alleged assault of a woman near Elberton last May. His execution was scheduled for June 13, but a habeas corpus was presented before Judge Bascom Deaver, of the federal court of Macon, on the grounds that the trial had been tainted by mob spirit with national guardsmen on duty in the courtroom during the trial. The writ was denied but Judge Deaver passed action on the case to the court of appeals. The negro was represented by W. A. Sutherland, of Atlanta, while T. J. Gress, assistant attorney general of Georgia represented the state.

Judge E. Marvin Underwood, in district court, gave the first day for the hearing of the fall criminal calendar over to the hearing of pleas. Except in two instances the pleas were entered by negroes who drew small sentences of less than a year for violating the dry law. There was but one jury trial, that of a negro woman, charged with a liquor offense. She was convicted but sentence will not be passed until today.

In charging the October term grand jury Monday morning, Judge Underwood urged a reform in the administration of criminal law. After pointing out that the largest number of cases to come before the court are for violation of the 18th amendment, Judge Underwood launched into a discussion of the administration of criminal law.

"In our eagerness for material progress we have paid too little attention to the administration of criminal laws, which has consequently

LIEUT. COM. HARLOW DIES IN AUTO CRASH

Former Naval Officer at Tech Is Killed in Wash- ington Accident.

Lieutenant Commander Hamilton Harlow, formerly associated with the naval department of Georgia Tech, was killed Monday when his automobile turned over on the highway near Washington and Annapolis.

Commander Harlow was a junior naval aide on the White House staff at the time of his death. During his residence in Atlanta, in 1926 and 1927, the commander was a popular figure in local clubs and social circles. He was a member of the Atlanta Athletic Club, the Piedmont Driving Club and other organizations. Commander Harlow came here in 1926 as an assistant to Captain J. J. London to organize and establish the naval unit at the Georgia School of Technology. During the first year of the Tech naval unit, all of the courses were conducted by Captain London and Commander Harlow. Later the young commander was transferred to the U. S. S. Marblehead in the Chinese station as navigator.

According to Associated Press dispatches from Washington, Commander Harlow was returning to Washington from a trip to the naval academy. The accident occurred at the intersection of the Crane and Defense highways, about 15 miles from Annapolis.

The younger Harlow was graduated from the naval academy in 1908. He was awarded the navy cross for his World War service, during which time he served as executive officer of the Destroyer Nicholson in an attack on the German submarine U-58. He also was cited for boarding the torpedoed steamship Luckenbach and taking it to port.

The President Hoover Monday dispatched a message of condolence to Commander Harlow's father, who now is visiting in San Francisco. The superintendent said the public

All School Debts Certain To Be Paid, Dr. Duggan Says

Dr. M. L. Duggan, state school superintendent, said Monday that payment of more than $1,000,000 to the common schools last week "will put a stop to all fear of repudiation of the state's debt to the schools."

"With the million dollars already sent, the certainty that other substantial payments will follow, the attitude of the general assembly and the governor toward the legality of these debts, and the increasing demand on the part of the public for fair, liberal and prompt support, confidence will be restored and the people generally will be encouraged to pay their school taxes and the schools will not be forced to close prematurely," he said.

Dr. Duggan said the statement was issued because of the "persistent publicity given to the state's failure to support its public school system during the past three or four years."

The superintendent said the public

"shall be kept constantly and fully informed as to the support of their common schools, for informed public sentiment will best insure fair and just treatment to the state's most important public interest. Local taxes have been voluntarily imposed against non-profit bearing farm properties for the better support of the schools and over the state generally these school taxes will be paid more willingly than taxes for any other purpose."

VEHICLE REPORT FILED BY WILSON

Secretary of State John B. Wilson Monday made public figures compiled for the use of the office of tax commissioner which takes over the motor vehicle department January 1, estimating that it would require 125,000 record plates for 1932.

The estimates were asked by Tax Commissioner Paul H. Doyal in order that he might prepare for auto registration next year. The figures of Mr. Wilson showed that of the auto registrations from October 1 to December 31, 1930, numbering 6,447, 90 per cent required new record plates. The figures showed that 140,700 cars were registered during the month of January this year, of which 20 per cent required new plates. The total number of transfers from October 1, 1930, to January 31, 1931, was 3,400.

Mr. Wilson estimated that 37,302 record plates of the 63,000 on hand October 1 would be required to February 1, 1932. The number on hand February 1, 1932, was estimated at 25,008, and an additional 100,000, Mr. Wilson said, would be necessary for the whole year of 1932.

FARMHAND IS HELD IN SLAYING OF FOUR

Prisoner Confesses Killing
Two Men, Girl and Baby.

KENOSHA, Wis., Oct. 5.—(AP)—Police held Frank Gray, a 40-year-old farmhand, today for the murder of a girl, two men and a baby.

Gray confessed the killings to Kenosha police.

The murders were done at the Boscher farmhouse near Burlington, Wisconsin.

Those found dead were: Frank Boscher, 66, Burlington; his son, Herbert, 30; Herbert's son, Bob, 18 months old, and Miss Celia Kerkman, 18, employed on the farm.

The adults had been killed by shotgun slugs and the baby beaten to death with a hammer.

The girl's body was found in an upstairs bedroom used by Gray, police said. The baby's body was beside her. The room showed signs of a terrific struggle.

Herbert's wife, ill in a Burlington hospital for several weeks, has not yet been told of the killings. The elder Boscher, owner of the farm, lived in Burlington with his wife. He had gone to the farm to visit the son. Gray fled the Boscher farm in the Boscher automobile. He was arrested when he was found in a soft drink parlor here.

YOUTH GETS 9 YEARS ON ROBBERY CHARGE

He was sentenced to seven years on the first count and two on the other.

Maffelert last Tuesday morning slugged and robbed a filling station operator at Daytona Beach of $35. He was arrested in Jacksonville and while being returned to Daytona Beach escaped by plunging into the Halifax river, despite that he was handcuffed. He was recaptured the next day at Titusville with a stolen car while the authorities dragged the river for his body.

Looking at Life by the Observer

This Is Up to You

It takes a tragedy, sometimes, to jar us into doing something about some grave abuse of which we have been conscious right along. When Andrew W. Mellon told us several years ago that doubtful speculative enterprises were taking $1,800,000,000 per annum from the widows and children of this country, no one became particularly excited. But when the widow of a well-known screen star chose self-inflicted death as the easiest way out for herself, her mother and her two little children, when she lost the $200,000 left by her husband and became deeply involved in debt through speculation, then it was a different matter.

Now the newspapers are waging a national campaign against "Widow Sharks." One western city found that they were taking millions a year from the widows of that one community alone. Mail regulations against questionable schemes are being rigidly enforced. But nothing the press can do, or that the government can do, will assure your wife and your children absolute protection against this hazard. That is up to YOU.

In my weekly messages I have tried to show you from time to time that the absolute safety of life insurance makes it a most excellent investment for you. Right now I am asking you to let me demonstrate how you can extend that element of absolute safety to your wife and children also, when your insurance property becomes theirs. This can be done through a most simple arrangement, whereunder your insurance will be made payable in the form of income, which the "widow sharks" cannot touch. Thus you will be sure that what you leave will provide the protection intended. You will relieve your widow of investment worries that might overwhelm even you.

I shall be very glad to advise you how this can be done. It will obligate you not at all. Simply write your name and address on the coupon below, or call me by phone.

SWANSON ASKS TRUCE FOR ANGLO-JAP NAVIES

Holiday Proposed To Allow
U. S. To Build Up To London Terms.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—(AP)—A democrat's suggestion that Japan and England stop building warships long enough to let the United States float her treaty navy was directed today to President Hoover.

Senator Swanson, of Virginia, ranking democrat on the senate naval committee, made the proposal. He asked that the president negotiate a five-year naval holiday during which the United States would continue construction so as to reach the comparative strength allowed by the London treaty.

Meanwhile, the president's program for cutting down naval expenditures received its first democratic support from Senator King, of Utah. The western senator, long an opponent of large naval expenditures, also endorsed the plea of a naval holiday.

Swanson, who has usually supported liberal appropriations for the fleet, said a naval holiday would be much more desirable than reductions in naval expenditures.

King promised his support to the president's naval program and said he hoped a naval holiday could be negotiated.

Chairman Borah, of the senate foreign relations committee, also has proposed a five-year naval holiday. After talking it over with the president last week, he said Mr. Hoover was sympathetic to the idea.

The United States has informally agreed to a holiday proposal advanced before the League of Nations by Italy, with the reservation that it could continue its destroyer construction program.

FLORIDAN'S BODY FOUND ON RAILROAD TRACKS

MIAMI, Fla., Oct. 5.—(AP)—The body of J. Franklin Beckham, 24, was found today badly mutilated, on tracks of the Florida East Coast railway in Coconut Grove, at conclusion of a search started this morning by detectives.

The detectives said the man apparently was killed when a train passed over his body about 9 o'clock last night. The body was found by E. R. Ford, who crossed the tracks on his way to work.

REPUBLICANS LOSE ELECTION OFFICIALS

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 5.—(AP)—By a state supreme court ruling today the republican party of Arkansas failed in a move to regain the right to name its representatives on county election boards.

The court dismissed a mandamus suit seeking to compel the secretary of state to accept petitions for a referendum on repeal of an act which repealed a 1929 law giving the republicans this privilege.

Failure of the republicans to attach a full copy of the proposed initiated act to the petitions was declared a fatal defect.

$50,000 Rum Cache Discovered Near Estate of Secretary Adams

SCITUATE, Mass., Oct. 5.—(AP)—Rum-runners who believed a barn situated between the summer estate of Charles Francis Adams, secretary of the navy, and the Glades Club would be a safe place to store a liquor cargo lost their gamble today. Seizure police and coast guardsmen seized 600 cases of liquor, which they valued at about $50,000 and arrested three men in an early morning raid on the barn. Two men leaped out windows and escaped in the darkness from the policemen, who burst into the building with drawn pistols.

The barn was on the property of the Glades Club but was some distance from the clubhouse and near the land of the secretary of the navy. Policemen became suspicious when they saw several automobiles passing through the town in the direction of Adams' estate and the club and they sent for reinforcements. As both properties border on the waterfront, the coast guards were called upon to aid in the raid.

Louis Gordon, Jacobs Siegel and Harry Stone, of Boston, surrendered to the officers. The policemen found the liquor piled in the barn and also seized an automobile which they said had been one they had seen approach the estate.

Just before the raid today the coast guard had noted unusual activity in the waters off here and had planned an offensive when the Seitate police called upon them to participate in the raid.

First reports of the seizure said it was made on the property of Secretary Adams. A check-up later with police and coast guards, however, proved that the barn was not the property of the navy secretary.

Just before the raid today the coast guard had noted unusual activity in the waters off here and had planned an offensive when the Seitate police called upon them to participate in the raid.

First reports of the seizure said it was made on the property of Secretary Adams. A check-up later with police and coast guards, however, proved that the barn was not the property of the navy secretary.

251 CASES PRESENTED TO SUPREME COURT

Large Crowd Packs Historic Chamber in Capitol as Justices Reconvene.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—(AP)—A new grist of controversies was presented today to the supreme court as it reconvened after a four-month recess. A large crowd of spectators packed the historic chamber at the capitol, where the court has been meeting for 70 years, as the black-robed justices filed into the room to begin the 143d session.

A number of lawyers were admitted to practice, a few motions were received in pending cases, and 251 cases were presented for the court's consideration.

It all consumed less than an hour. Then the court, headed by Chief Justice Hughes, walked gravely from the room. Another session will be held next Monday to receive oral arguments and announce the cases that will be reviewed. In the meantime, the justices will work on pending cases.

Due to the absence of President Hoover from Washington, the court was prevented from following its usual custom of calling at the White House to pay its respects. It will do so later.

All of the justices appeared to be in as good physical condition as when the court adjourned last June, although several were indisposed for brief periods during the recess.

UNDERWORLD LEADER SHOT IN LOS ANGELES

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Augusto Sasso, referred to in reports to the city council and the police commission as ruler of the Los Angeles underworld, was shot and critically wounded by an unidentified assailant as he entered his home early today.

"I've been put on the spot," was Sasso's only remark. He refused to name the persons he believed responsible for the attempt on his life. Sasso was shot through the chest and in the groin.

Sasso is the owner and operator of several rooming houses in the north end of the city. Frequently he had been referred to from the floor of the police commission and the city council as "Albert Marco's successor as the ruler of Los Angeles' underworld."

Searcy Refutes Criticism Of Legion's Dry Law Stand

Griffin Jurist, However,
Declares "Dry Laws Best on Books," in Charge to Grand Jury.

GRiffin, Ga., Oct. 5.—(AP)—A declaration that the "prohibition laws are the best on our books" was made today by Judge W. E. H. Searcy Jr. in charging the Spalding superior court grand jury.

The judge pointed out, however, that "the right to petition still exists in our land," and assailed "self-appointed guardians of the public morals" who criticized the American Legion for passing a resolution petitioning congress to submit the prohibition question to the states for a referendum.

"Personally," Judge Searcy said, "I think the prohibition laws are the best on our books and as long as jails, hospitals, insane asylums, poor houses and cemeteries are filled with persons sent there by alcohol, they should be enforced."

The judge said that many persons appear prone to believe the only laws on the books deal with prohibition. He said it had become "such a vital interest that it is a matter of discussion wherever and whenever people gather together. All sorts of organizations are thinking of the problem and it is being considered by conventions."

"Only recently an organization of ex-service men in Detroit gathered in that city for their national convention and saw fit to pass a resolution petitioning congress to submit the prohibition question to the states for a vote. Certainly there was nothing wrong in that. The right to petition still exists in our land."

"But," said Judge Searcy, "certain self-appointed, self-righteous guardians of the public morals saw fit to criticize these men and call them drunk and degenerates. They have all too soon forgotten the sacrifice of these men overseas when their country needed them."

"Such self-appointed guardians of the public morals are intolerant, ignorant and bigoted and their charges are absolutely false."

PROPOSAL FOR CHANNEL PUSHED BY AUGUSTANS

Letter Pointing Out Advantages of Plan Presented to Waterways Group.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Oct. 5.—(AP)—A letter, pointing out the advantages to commerce of Augusta's plan for a nine-foot channel from Augusta to the sea was presented Monday to the Atlantic Deepwaterways Association, meeting in Boston, by a delegation of Augusta citizens.

"The mayor, council and citizens of Augusta, and those of that vast hinterland of the South-Atlantic states who are seeking closer commercial communion with their countrymen of the north Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific states, and with the markets of the world, would like the privilege of availing of this opportunity to acquaint the members of the Atlantic Deepwaterways Association with the basic reasons underlying the improvement program of Augusta and the Savannah river valley directed toward the building of a nine-foot channel from Augusta to the sea," the letter said.

The letter points out that Augusta is at the head of navigation on the Savannah river, "with a vast territory rich in agricultural, mineral and manufacturing resources in the interior of the southeast that will be influenced in its economic development by a nine-foot channel on the Savannah river."

Location of the important textile center in the Piedmont region and the possibility of moving textile goods from the area to eastern markets, to the north via the Panama canal and by direct steamer from Savannah to European markets, by means of the Savannah river, was pointed out.

A delegation of Augustans went to Boston to attend the convention. Those going included Thomas J. Hamilton, vice chairman of the Savannah river improvement commission and editor of the Augusta Chronicle; Mayor William D. Jennings, Ben E. Lester, chairman of the municipal boat line commission, and Lon L. Fleming, member of city council.

PREFERENCE CHARGED IN NEW YORK CHARITY

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Charges that the $8,000,000 expended by New York city for unemployment relief had gone to enrolled democrats in preference to needy men not members of Tammany, have been filed with the state emergency relief commission.

James Marshall, chairman of the republican advisory committee of New York county, made his grievance public in the letter filed with Jesse Strauss, chairman of the new unemployment commission.

John Wesley Letter Presented to College

MACON, Ga., Oct. 5.—(AP)—A letter, said to have been written by John Wesley, early Methodist leader, in which he advises his brother, Samuel, to "take care to walk closely with God and to exhort others so to do," has been presented to Wesleyan college here.

The college said the gift was made by William L. Clements, of Bay City, Mich., a collector.

The letter, dated August 15, 1771, at Bristol, follows:

"Dear Samuel, I had intended you for a more distant circuit where I believe you would have been exceedingly useful. But we can hardly show common sense enough to our aged parent. Therefore, for your mother's sake, I appoint you to the Derbyshire circuit, which you know borders upon that of Manchester."

"Take care to walk closely with god and to exhort others so to do. Be instant in season, out of season. Encourage all to expect salvation here. I am your affectionate brother, J. Wesley."

Denmark's Co-operative Movement Wins Praise of Professor H. A. Hunt

FORT VALLEY, Ga., Oct. 5.—(AP)—Just back from a tour of Europe on a scholarship from the Julius Rosenwald Foundation, Professor H. A. Hunt, negro president of the Fort Valley High and Industrial school, has high praise for Denmark, where, he says, everything is run on a co-operative basis.

"There are practically no very wealthy people in Denmark and only a few very poor ones," he said. "All most all the capital is equally distributed among all the people. Instead of big fortunes being amassed by a few magnates, the capital is distributed in small amounts among the masses of the people. The Danes accepted many years ago the theory that the people of that country are happiest where there are few who have too much and fewer still who have too little. I think you might say a slogan with them."

The Fort Valley educator, whose work in the school here has attracted wide attention, was especially impressed with the co-operative movement in Denmark. He said they not only have co-operative production, but co-operative consumption. They have co-operative dairies, meat-packing plants, markets of dairies, banks, factories, dry goods stores, groceries and other kinds of businesses.

He said the movement had been brought to its highest perfection in the dairying, poultry, raising and meat-packing industries. He said each community had a local co-operative organization, all of which are affiliated to a national co-op. Many of the industries maintain sales experts in other nations to find an outlet for Danish products. There is a high standardization of products, he said, pointing out that the name of the farmer selling an egg is stamped on the product.

Most of the Danes, he related, live in little cottages of brick and stucco, all bright and clean, and their yards are a blaze of growing flowers. Many city dwellers own plots of land in the suburbs on which they grow vegetables and fruits.

The professor said the people of Denmark are highly intelligent, homogenous and attributed their happiness to these circumstances, and the fact that they are industrious and thrifty. Also, he said, "They are very democratic. The king is the most democratic fellow you ever saw. When I first reached Denmark I attended the international dairy congress. The king came to one of the sessions and said a few words. He wore a regular colored preacher's coat—you know, one of those old Jim-crower tail coats. And when he got through speaking he came down in the hall and shook hands with many of the delegates."

"He came up to a man next to me, shook his hand in the most cordial fashion and asked him where he was from. The man said he was from England. Then he turned to me, shook my hand and said: 'Are you an Englishman, too?' I told him no, I was an American. He was just as friendly as an east side politician."

Gray Hair

Best Remedy is Made
At Home

To half pint of water add one ounce of Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair and makes it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

"It seems like everybody is mad about something," Barrett remarked. "With one man its prohibition, another farming, another something else. We've got to placate these fellows."

Barrett was born in Pike county near Warm Springs. His headquarters are at Washington, while his home is at Union City, Ga. He has been active in the farm movement for 27 years and was a member of the farm home conference initiated by President Theodore Roosevelt, a kinsman of the New York governor.

The Georgia farm leader said some weakness of all farm relief was in leadership. He attributed part of the difficulties of the farm board to leadership, adding that winning the confidence of agriculturists was more important than handling his produce. He linked better conditions for growers with improvements in other phases of national life.

"To compare the Cadillac V-16 with any other motor car is obviously unfair for the V-16 is an altogether different kind of automobile."

Therefore, to every fine-car owner in America, we say, quite frankly:

—if you have believed that other cars were smooth, you will have no words with which to describe the action of the Cadillac V-16.

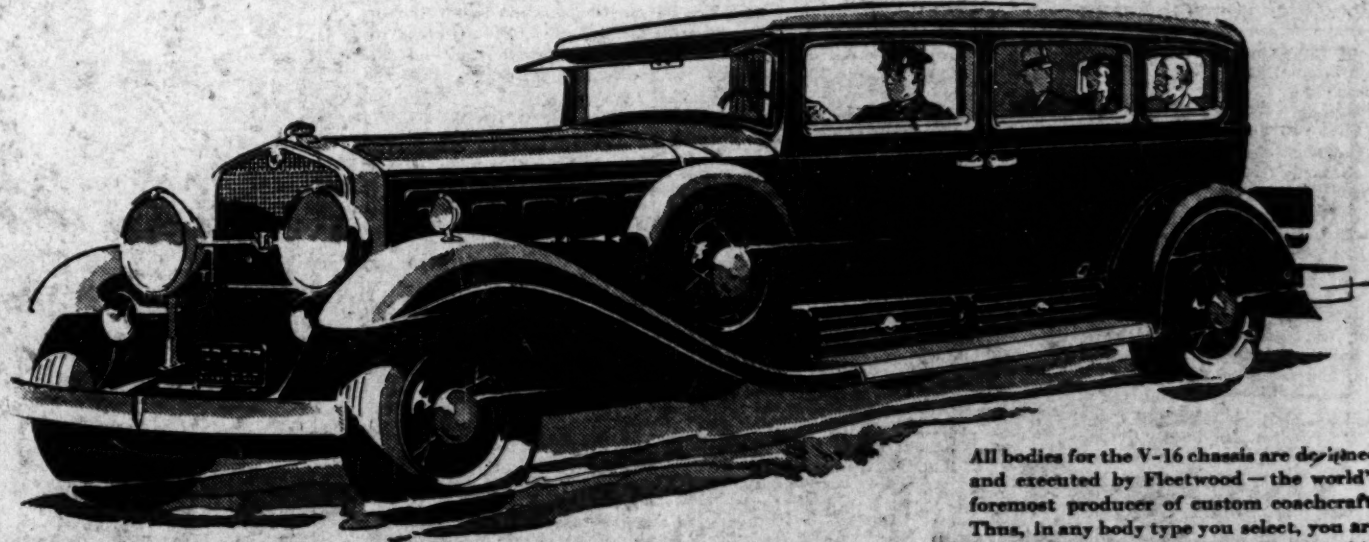

—if you have believed that other motor cars were quiet, you will discover that quiet and silent are two completely different terms.

—if you have believed that other cars were responsive to the throttle, you'll wonder what to say about the Cadillac V-16.

—and, if you have believed that other cars were comfortable to ride in and easy to handle, you'll find the V-16 a revelation.

Come in and check these facts for yourself. Half an hour at the wheel is all you'll need.

POLITICAL FIGHT SEEN OVER TITLE CO. ROW

Effort To Oust Concern
From Courthouse Space
Made by Atlanta Lawyers.

Threats of a political fight during the next county election over the title and privileges of the Atlanta Title & Trust Co. at the courthouse were made Monday afternoon. A committee from the Lawyers' Club of Atlanta met with County Clerk J. W. Simmons and three members of the county board of commissioners to decide what action would be necessary to oust the title company from the space it occupied at the courthouse.

The result of the conference was the announcement by the committee from the Lawyers' Club that petitions would be circulated this week for presentation to the county board and to Simmons requesting that the title company have its space at the courthouse taken from it and that it be forced to abstract its papers in the same manner as members of the Atlanta bar.

The threat of a political issue was voiced by William Grant, a member of the committee from the Lawyers' Club, after he had asked Simmons whether he did or did not oppose the title company's access to the original papers and deeds. Simmons declined to answer and Grant stated that the matter could be made an issue at the next election.

The committee was composed of Henry A. Beaman, Stephens Mitchell, William Grant and Albert Tuttle. They met with Simmons and Commissioners Walter Hendrix, Walter Stewart and Paul Etheridge. They argued that a recent supreme court decision, when "boiled down," means that the question as to occupancy of space at the courthouse on the part of the title company was for the county commission to decide, and that Simmons had the power to decide whether the company had access to original papers.

Neither Etheridge nor Stewart had any comment to make, but Hendrix stated that as far as he was "personally concerned" he felt that the title company had no more right to occupy space in the clerk's office than lawyers to bring their stenographers and take up desk space in the courthouse.

King at 126 The Prado, who is membership chairman, it was said. The Gordon quartet is said to be the best to visit Atlanta since the days of the Florzaley quartet, which made several appearances here.

Mobilization of Pennies Reaps Big Harvest, Mrs. Glenn Finds

What little pennies will do when mobilized was told by Dudley Cowles, of Atlanta, in a letter to Mrs. Thomas K. Glenn, head of the Penny-a-Meal Club Monday.

People generally don't appreciate the fact, according to Mr. Cowles, that just one little penny a meal from all the employed in Atlanta will take care of all the unemployed this winter. And Mr. Cowles knows what he is talking about for he saw what the little pennies would do some years ago when he was at Hampton, Va.

Here is the story of the pennies as told by Mr. Cowles to Mrs. Glenn: "Please permit me to congratulate you on the Penny-a-Meal Club. I am confident that it will be all you have dreamed for—a real blessing to the unemployed."

"Most of us Americans think that little worth while can be accomplished with pennies. This is a mistake. When I was connected with the public schools in Hampton, Va., I realized that many of the graduates of our high school would be denied a college education unless rendered substantial financial aid. I proposed that a scholarship fund be raised by each pupil in the public schools contributing 2 cents a week, the price of a postage stamp. Well, the result was amazing. In fact, from that time until I left Hampton, covering a period of three years, no graduate of the high school failed to go to college because of lack of funds; and I am gratified to say that some of the most useful citizens of Virginia today received their college education by means of this penny fund.

"Little drops of water, little grains of sand, Make the mighty ocean, and the wondrous land."

"If each employed citizen will contribute his penny a meal for the next five months we shall have no real distress among the unemployed this winter."

"I just want to impress this fact on everybody," said Mrs. Glenn after reading Mr. Cowles' letter, "that the success of the penny-a-meal plan depends on every man, woman and child who is employed and able giving his or her three pennies a day. If all will do that we will have no unemployment problem this winter."

Mayor Key Joins 'Imps of Hell, Inc.,' Scores Dr. Wilson

Mayor James L. Key, stormy petrel in Atlanta church circles because of his aggressive anti-prohibition stand, announced Monday he had accepted honorary membership in "Imps of Hell, Inc.," organized by members of the American Legion at Nashville, Tennessee.

"Imps of Hell, Inc." received its conception and impulse from the words of Dr. Clarence True Wilson, of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, who spoke such a phrase in commenting on the vote for wines and beer at the recent national American Legion convention at Detroit.

In accepting his membership, Mayor Key attacked "ecclesiastical and other mountebanks who have exploited the prohibition question for their own personal political or financial benefit."

He added that the conduct of such persons justified the Legionnaires in "seizing upon this term of vulgar abuse and wearing it as a badge of honor."

"The people of the United States have observed with amazement and resentment the abuse and denunciation heaped upon the heads of the American Legion for their patriotic stand upon the prohibition question," Mayor Key continued in his acceptance telegram.

"The men who obeyed the call of their country to arms... should not have heaped upon their heads the abuse of ecclesiastical and other mountebanks who were skulking in the rear when the time of test and trial came."

No More Piles

Thousands Praise This Great Internal Remedy That Freed Them From Awful Pile Misery

If you think that the surgeon's knife is the only method of escape from the misery of piles, it is because you haven't heard of the new remedy known as Dr. Leonhardt's HEM-ROID.

Don't even think of an operation or waste time on external remedies until you have tried this quick acting yet harmless internal medicine.

It was Dr. J. S. Leonhardt who discovered that piles are internal caused by blood congestion in the lower bowels. It was he who discovered the internal medicine—HEM-ROID—that quickly ends piles by stimulating the circulation, healing and restoring the weak, flabby, almost dead parts.

Now Dr. Leonhardt wants every sufferer from itching, bleeding or protruding piles to benefit by his discovery. So Jacobs' Drug Stores and good druggists everywhere are authorized to sell HEM-ROID with guarantee that it will positively end piles in any form or money back.

On that honorable basis, get HEM-ROID Tablets today and say to your piles: GOODBYE FOREVER. (adv.)

SHOT BY OFFICER, MAN NEAR DEATH

"Red" Wood, Facing Short Sentence, Wounded Twice by A. D. Poole.

Shot twice by Patrolman A. D. Poole, son of the chief of detectives, while trying to escape, R. H. "Red" Wood, 25, professional ballplayer, Monday was probably fatally wounded. Chances for his recovery were said to be slight at Grady hospital, where he was carried. Wood, the second victim of police guns here within the past two weeks, was wanted on a two-year-old minor offense charge.

Wood was arrested two years ago and convicted for drunkenness. He was given a 60-day sentence in the stockade. When officers came for him Monday at a house on South Boulevard, he jumped out of a rear window and ran. Poole shot him once in the thigh. As he approached, Poole said, Wood, lying on the ground, made a motion toward his pocket, as though to draw a gun. He fired again, the second bullet taking effect in the abdomen. Wood declared he was unarmed but admitted that he had been sentenced and that he had tried to escape.

Detective C. C. Harper, who arrested the young ballplayer two years ago, learning that Wood was at the home of his mother, Mrs. Mattie London, 204 South Boulevard, Monday notified Patrolmen Poole and F. R. Watson by radio, and summoned Detective J. C. Simmons to aid him. Then, with the house surrounded, they advanced.

Wood denied that he had a police record and that for the last year he had been playing in the outfield for Shreveport, La., and later in the season for the Waterloo, Iowa, club in the Mississippi Valley league. Efforts are being made by police to trace Wood's activities during the past year.

A new investigation into the case of Bennett Hall, a boy convict who was shot to death while trying to escape from the chain gang on September 24, is being planned by county officials. Hall, who was sentenced for "boobing" on a train, was killed by a guard when he tried to run away.

15-Year-Old Fulton High Girl Wins Georgia Spelling Title

After spelling through the Tarbut-Stevens spelling book, the official list of high school test words and the old Blue-Back speller, the three pretty girls shown above required a second trip through the Blue-Back speller to select a winner. Miss Mildred Clark, of Fulton High school, at left, won first prize of $100. Miss Irene Noell, center, of Oglethorpe High, won second prize of $50. Miss Edna Nuckolls, at right, of Chamblee High, won third award of $15. They are the best spellers in Georgia, their awards attested.

Out of a two-hour and 40-minute siege of spelling the most difficult words in the English language Monday afternoon, Miss Mildred Clark, 15-year-old student of Fulton High school, emerged as Georgia champion of the old Blue-Back speller. And with tired lines around her youthful brown eyes, she smiled briefly and attributed her success to "plenty of luck."

It was at 3 o'clock in the afternoon when the real battle of spellers at the state championship spelling bee at the Southeastern Fair settled down to a grueling and heart-breaking pace. Since 1:20, when the 28 boys and girls started off on the spelling marathon, tricky and unusual words were given out by referees of the event. When one hour and 40 minutes had passed, only 10 remained in the contest. On and on the referees droned out the words. Quickly and neatly the eight girls and two boys left in the match spelled. Soon the two boys—both assured of prizes in the first tie—dropped out. Other girls failed at words which they ordinarily could spell with ease. It had become a test of nerves and stamina.

Referees Call for Relief. M. L. Dugan, state school superintendent, and Jere Wells, head of the Fulton county educational department, alternated with Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of Atlanta schools, in giving out the words. Soon the pace grew too hard for them and they sought relief. But three tired little girls were still undaunted at 4 o'clock.

It was at that time that it seemed a hopeless matter to "spell down" either one of the three remaining. Miss Clark, Miss Edna Nuckolls, of Chamblee High, and Miss Irene Noell, of Oglethorpe High school. A suggestion that a draw be declared met with the disapproval of one of the girls and after a short rest the contest was on again.

The three girls—all of them 15 years old and seniors in their schools—were noticeably weary. Grim lines tightened around youthful mouths and that courageous woman of history, Jeanne de Arc, might have envied the fortitude of the spellers.

On and on they spelled. The sun was sinking behind the blue lake and the handful of spectators who had remained to see it through began to fear a hopeless deadlock. "Rutabaga" . . . and it was Miss Nuckolls' turn. She tripped on the letters, bit her lip and spelled it wrong. Just a case of putting an "e" where that first "a" should have been.

Two girls were left, but it was evident that it was the beginning of the end. Miss Noell, who only six weeks ago recovered from an illness which had kept her in bed for several months, appeared to be on the verge of exhaustion.

"Indigenous"—and it was Miss Noell's turn. She stammered, stopped,

FARM BOARD'S OFFER FOR RELIEF OPPOSED

Plan Doesn't Coincide With Committee's Program, Leaders Declare.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—(AP)—A farm board offer to help feed and clothe needy Americans encountered serious obstacles today at the headquarters of President Hoover's relief organization.

From members of the advisory committee dealing with practical means of administering relief came a multitude of objections. This committee, headed by Fred C. Croxton, met for the first time, spending five hours behind closed doors after an informal address of welcome from Walter S. Gifford, director of the national organization.

Difficulties surrounding the board's offer were stressed by several members of the committee, which included Newton D. Baker, of Cleveland, former secretary of war. It was pointed out the plan involved setting up a milling and distribution system, cutting against numerous lines of established businesses at a time the committee also is urging shorter working hours and employment distribution.

The importance of community independence from outside interference in tackling "h" problems was emphasized. Past experiences were drawn on to demonstrate the unsettling effects of ignoring community merchants and businessmen.

Especially in respect to community relief functions the committee agreed many localities were slow to grasp their responsibilities and inclined toward leaving the work to state organizations.

The committee agreed to make every effort to halt the "hopeless migration" of families looking for work. It took a strong position against uncontrolled relief methods such as bread lines. A program of classification to advise all communities of their places in the relief picture was adopted.

A report from the Red Cross saying 3,000 families now are being cared for in drought areas of Montana and North Dakota was received with the prediction this figure may reach 16,000 families before winter ends.

TWO NEGROES HELD IN FLORIDA KILLING

BRADENTON, Fla., Oct. 5.—(AP)—Two unidentified negroes were held in the county jail here today in connection with the murder of Andrew J. Sweat, 62-year-old store operator of Manatee, who was beaten and robbed late Saturday night.

It was at that time that it seemed a hopeless matter to "spell down" either one of the three remaining. Miss Clark, Miss Edna Nuckolls, of Chamblee High, and Miss Irene Noell, of Oglethorpe High school. A suggestion that a draw be declared met with the disapproval of one of the girls and after a short rest the contest was on again.

Another performance will be given Wednesday night at the same hour. A complete sell-out has been reported by the box office for all downstairs seats. School children will be admitted to the balcony at both performances for 50 cents.

CHAMBER TO SEEK EASY FARM CREDIT

National Body Launches Drive To Alleviate Ills of Agriculture.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Business leaders moved today to loosen the banking valve holding credit from farmers.

A special committee was appointed by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States to study means of liberalizing credits so needed funds to conduct farm operations might be turned into rural pockets.

The action followed presentation to the chamber's directors of a report by the agricultural department committee, warning of wholesale delinquency in meeting farm tax and interest obligations.

The board also adopted two resolutions, one calling for a curb on short selling on the New York Stock Exchange and the other requesting the federal reserve board to liberalize its attitude toward discount of paper.

The agricultural committee said in its report: "The banking and credit services available to agriculture are inadequate. The numerous failures of commercial banks reflect in a measure not only the rapid decline in agricultural commodities, but rather the failures of communities as well as of banks."

The special committee was urged to direct its attention toward aiding particularly localities in which banks are closed and in which live stock and implements are being liquidated.

Short selling on stock exchanges was regarded as unfortunate, coming at the peak of the fall harvest and the committee recommended temporary suspension of the practice.

The committee suggested that for immediate relief the prices of farm products "must be placed on a reasonable parity with those of other products and services."

Land utilization was commended and instructions given to the chamber's agricultural department to study possibilities of expanding immediate credit bank facilities to give more aid to co-operatives.

The committee said consideration must be given to the effect on agriculture, which is being organized by Mr. Maitland. All seats for Little Theater plays are reserved, and reservations can be made by phoning the box office, at 91 Forsyth street, Walnut 2224.

The cast, made up entirely of Atlanta talent, includes Miss Marjorie Bellfuss, Miss Carmen Mather, Mike McDowell, Guy Woolford Jr., Mrs. Jane Sharp, Cary B. Wilmer Jr., Mrs. Elizabeth Reed Barlow, Cyril Smith, Mark Temple, Mrs. Ruby M. Slaton, Melvin Walker and Jack Wolff.

culture of England's dropping of the gold basis.

"One result already," it said, "is that the protection of the American tariff is substantially lost."

Silas H. Strawn, president, named these members to the special committee: W. F. Gephart, St. Louis; John K. Otley, Atlanta; Nathan Adams, Dallas; Lewis E. Pierson, New York; C. T. Jaffray, Minneapolis; Oscar Wells, Birmingham; William V. Hodges, Denver; and Felix M. McWhirter, Indianapolis.

Woman Shoots Self.

WASHING ATLANTA'S SKYLINE

If you live next door to a family that heats with gas, you know how much cleaner the atmosphere has become. Instead of black, sooty smoke blowing down into your windows, bringing sulphuric acid to wreck your curtains, upholstery, rugs and linens—last winter only clean breezes blew from that neighbor's rooftop.

And downtown, too, as the hotels and buildings change over to this modern, efficient fuel, smoke and soot which cost merchants and other citizens thousands of dollars annually, will diminish.

The advent of natural gas, a richer, more economical fuel, is making this possible. Not only is natural gas helping to make Atlanta a cleaner, healthier place to live, but it has opened the way for Atlanta's Greater Industrial Growth.

"He said he had remarkable ability, and thought it very amazing that he should have sprung from such a mediocre family."

"I told you about Dan's family myself," said Fabia defiantly.

"Yes, I know you did, dear. But you didn't tell me about the girl he intends to marry. Perhaps he didn't tell you about her."

"What girl does he intend to marry?"

"I believe her name is Hearn—Agnes Hearn. Dr. Warburton says she's very attractive. She works on the telephone switchboard at the Hotel Statler."

This was Friday. Fabia wasn't going to see Dan again until next Thursday. Their trip to Newton yesterday had been very successful. They hadn't touched each other, unless the occasional slight grazing of knees could be called touching. Fabia didn't think Dan had been conscious of it. Dan was going to Newton again next Thursday. It had been arranged that she would meet him at 12 o'clock on Charles street, as near Mount Vernon as she could park. Dan had several patients nearby. He would see them and run out to Newton between 12 and 2. He was due at the office at 2.

She arrived at the foot of Mount Vernon street at a few minutes of 12. Dan might finish early. She was trembling a little when she stopped the engine of her car. She had spent a terrible five days since her mother's call on Dr. Warburton before Fabia had been on the point of calling up Dan and making an earlier appointment. She'd ask him about Agnes Hearn the minute he arrived. Five minutes after 12. He'd be here any minute now.

Over and over again for the last five days Fabia's intellect had tried to persuade her it was perfectly legitimate for Dan to intend to marry the girl at the Statler. Why shouldn't he? He certainly had made it clear that he had no intention of marrying Fabia. But his emotions cried out against the possibility. He had told her she was the only girl he had ever kissed like that. Had he been lying? Did he make appointments with Agnes Hearn, too? Did he keep her waiting, too? It was 10 minutes after 12.

Agnes Hearn was very pretty. It hurt Fabia that she was so pretty. Fabia had never been hurt by another girl's prettiness before. Fabia had been so harried that she had given in finally to the nagging curiosity she couldn't control, and had gone into the Hotel Statler. From a safe distance she had examined the girl at the telephone switchboards. Miss Hearn was very dark, a decided brunette with glorious brown eyes and long lashes. Fabia had gone out into the early-lit streets with a faint feeling new to her. She simply hated that girl's prettiness! Oh, well, probably she had very little intelligence, and, like Dan, had gone out into the manner born. Her mother was right. It was 20 minutes after 12! Twelve-thirty. Twelve-thirty-five. Twelve-forty. What if he did not come at all?

Perhaps he had had an unexpected call from a patient. But unless the patient was dying, he could have sent a message to her. Perhaps he had had an accident.

Fabia waited until 2 o'clock, and then went into a shop nearby and called Dr. Warburton's office. Dan's voice answered her.

"Hello," he said in a serene tone. Fabia did not reply.

"Hello," he repeated, and, after a pause, "hello."

Still Fabia remained silent. Dan began signaling central.

"Hello, hello," he repeated patiently at intervals. Fabia had hung up the receiver. Oh, he wasn't worthy of her burning cheeks, aching throat, and tears that would blur her eyes as she guided her car through the congested traffic.

She would have nothing more to do with him. He wasn't a gentleman. He sat while her mother stood. He kept her waiting for two hours on a street corner. And his family were awful! Thank goodness he had kept her waiting. It had brought her to her senses. Thank goodness, too.

he had kissed her while he was intending to marry another girl, and showed the cheap stuff he was made of before it was too late. Thank goodness! Thank goodness! She was free of him at last!

She returned home at dark. The moment she entered the house she asked her maid for her telephone messages. None had come from Dan.

All during dinner, all during the evening, every time the telephone bell rang, her heart beat faster. She told herself, when finally she went to bed at 11:30, that Dan had kept her waiting for nearly 12 hours now! It was inexorable. She would never forgive him.

Fabia left the house before 8:30 the next morning to escape the torture of more waiting. She didn't return till noon. She found Dan's note upon her desk.

"Dear Fabia," the note said, "I couldn't keep our date yesterday afternoon. A patient at the hospital detained me. I am very sorry. I hope you weren't much inconvenienced. I'm on my way to an emergency operation. In haste, Dan."

She read it twice, then tore it into tiny bits and stuffed them under the carefully laid logs in her fireplace. Her cheeks were flaming. She sat down at her desk and wrote her first note to Dan.

"Dear Dan: It was inexorable. I don't want to see you again ever, please. I will have Peter left at your mother's house at an early date. In haste, Fabia."

She sealed and stamped the envelope, then ran swiftly to the mail box located at the entrance of the driveway, and dropped her letter into it. There! That was over! There was a dance tonight. She would have a gorgeous time!

The morning after the dance Fabia was awakened at 9 o'clock from a deep sleep by Jennie.

"There's a young gentleman on the telephone, Miss Fabia. I told him you weren't downstairs yet. He said it was very important."

Something stronger than her indignation drew her to the waiting receiver.

"Hello, Fabia. It's Dan. Your note has just come. I don't understand it."

"I thought I made it clear."

"Will you be at home for the next hour?"

"I'm afraid I shan't."

"I'll be out as soon as I can get there."

"I'm sorry, but I shan't be here."

"All right, don't be there. I'm coming out, anyway." And he hung up the receiver before Fabia could say another word.

"What's it all about, Fabia?" burst out Dan after Fabia's cool "Good morning."

Fabia replied briefly, "You had an engagement with me and broke it."

"I explained in my note why I broke it. I couldn't help it."

"No, but the patient dying?"

"I explained. A patient needed me. Surely you wouldn't want me to neglect a patient for anything of a social nature."

"Wasn't it possible for you to have written a brief line of explanation and to have sent it to me by a messenger boy?"

"Why, I suppose it was possible, but I never even thought of such a thing. I wrote you a note later. I thought that sufficient. I didn't know you'd take it so seriously."

"A gentleman would know."

Dan's color deepened. She could see she was hurting him. Well, he had hurt her. Still festering in her consciousness was Agnes Hearn. Jealousy can do awful things.

"What did you do last evening?" she inquired.

"I was called to the hospital to fix up a man who'd been in a bad smash-up at 7. Later I went to a movie."

"Did you go with your friend from the Statler?"

"What did you say?"

"You heard me. With Agnes Hearn. Dr. Warburton told my mother about her."

"Well, what if I did go to a movie with Agnes Hearn?" flashed Dan. He was angry now. "Is there any reason I shouldn't?"

JUNIOR LEAGUE JOTTINGS

BY MRS. HENRY W. GRADY JR.

Fall is here bringing with it new thoughts and new styles in everything. The Junior League is heard from again after a period of summer quiet. Each week now there will be something to report, so every Tuesday morning through the Junior League Jottings we will endeavor to bring to these columns all events and happenings of interest in the Junior League world.

When the Junior League meeting is called to order this afternoon we will be at the beginning of a new year of activities. As Mrs. R. L. Foreman Jr., our president, outlines the winter's program, attention will be focused on her and the five other officers. Miss Catherine Norcross, our attractive first vice president, will remind us that she is keeping the record of service cards this year, and Mrs. Green Warren, delightfully fitted for her job as second vice president, will take charge of the new members as soon as they are elected. Romantic interest centers in Miss Augusta Porter, the recording secretary, who will be one of our loveliest November her Jones, our magazine chairman, has been on the job in spite of the heat.

Everywhere one goes lately people are talking of the new Waldorf-Astoria and from all the pictures it must be a glorious place. Junior Leaguers should be particularly interested as our national headquarters and clubrooms are located on the 19th and 20th floors and an invitation to a housewarming on October 8 has been sent through the Junior League Magazine to all the 23,350 members who might be in New York on that date.

The magazine, Fortune, has a long article on the Waldorf in its October issue. It tells of the play this famous hotel has made to regain its former prestige. Many are the clubs and societies that have been persuaded to make their headquarters at the Waldorf. And in referring to the Junior League we are quoting from Fortune with, we hope pardonable pride—and, biggest plum of all, the Association of Junior Leagues (two wing floors and a roof garden).

Members who have not responded to the letter asking for rummage are requested to bring a bundle to the meeting this afternoon.

FRIENDLY COUNSEL BY CAROLINE CHATFIELD

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondence invited. Your name held in confidence. Write Miss Chatfield, care The Atlanta Constitution.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD:

I am one of the old-fashioned girls. I don't go to wild parties because I don't like them. I cannot dance and I do not smoke. I long for a home of my own. Please tell me where, and how, to go about getting it. If I could only find a nice clean young man who would make me a good husband, I can cook and sew. Especially I would like to enjoy the home and the peace and quiet of a home where I could be a good mother and a good wife. I don't know how to make connection with them. I seldom go anywhere, being a great home body.

ANSWER:

Most business offices offer good opportunity for a girl to meet men and associate with them on any basis that she may desire. We generally get what we go after in this life. A girl cannot stay at home and expect to meet men; unless she is so charming that the men seek her out. It is one of the blessings of work to the modern girl, that it puts her on the street, so to speak. There may be competition to meet, but that is the life of any trade. It would be better to compete with other girls and lose out than to sit at home and have no experience of life and no association with men.

One of the reasons that there are so many marriages among society in the great cities is that their social life throws them in such intimate and daily contact with each other, the men and the women. Propinquity is one of the greatest forces in the mating of people. No woman and no man can fall in love with every person of the opposite sex whom he or she meets. It is the person close at hand, the person who is in the person close at hand. That is the reason that it is rather dangerous for a married woman, or a married man, to be too closely associated with one of the opposite sex. If there is something wrong, real or fancied, with that one's marriage, close association with an outsider may divert the affections of that one from the proper channel.

"The woods is full" of men who are looking for old-fashioned girls who feel about behavior, and life in general, as you have said you feel. Every day I get letters from young men who are desiring the loose ideas and low moral sense of the modern young girls. It would be like to suppose that all of them are agreed on that point. Many of the men like the women to be what they are; companions in fast living. But the proper, responsible man is not considering these women as candidates for marriage with him. When that girl comes along who is not too much interested in the dishing and not soiled with too much experience and one whose taste is not vitiated by too much promiscuity in love affairs.

The merchant's slogan that "You tell the truth today that you may be believed tomorrow" may be paraphrased for the benefit of young girls to read this way: "You behave in circumspect fashion with all men today that the right man will sense that fact in the long tomorrow."

As for dancing and smoking, that is a matter for the individual's preference. Some people consider that those things have a place in the moral equation and some consider that they do not. Certainly smoking is a useless performance which, as a Greek fruit vendor says, "It is only a way to burn up money."

Every woman, at some time in her life, sees herself the wife of a good man and the mistress of a home. It is nature's suggestion to her and we always play with the thoughts that nature suggests. Sometimes we turn them down. Sometimes we are unable to translate them into real experience, for one reason or another. Certainly this suggestion is a reasonable one as well as a natural one and my advice to you is to put yourself in the way of seeing it to a successful conclusion.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD:

I am a young man of twenty, very much in love with a girl about the same age. She is in love with me as well. We are ready to get married, but for one thing: I am a bootlegger and it is a great source of worry to her. I can make a good living in this way and if I were to start in a new line it would be a long time before I could hope to earn enough to get married on. I tell her to come on and marry me now and when we have got on our feet financially and saved a little I will get into something else. Can't you suggest something that will make my position stronger with my girl?

ANSWER:

No indeed, you don't love the girl; you may be fooling yourself but you can't fool me. If you loved her you would never take such a risk with her happiness. You wouldn't think of marrying her and subjecting her to the disgrace of having a jailbird for a husband and that's what you would be if you were caught. One of the first indications of love is protection of the loved object. If we have a precious possession, that we prize particularly, we insure it. But you claim to love this girl and are willing to marry her and jeopardize her happiness.

To begin with, money that comes easy goes easy. They say it is actually true that most of the large fortunes made in the days of the open saloon, by men in the liquor business, have been lost. It is a miraculous sign from heaven that it was a wicked business, it is the old law at work: what came easy went easy and quickly. You cannot hope to accumulate any amount of money in your game, even if you escape the toils of the law. The time to get out will never come unless it comes now. Every day you stay in makes it the much harder to get out. All the time a steady position of character is in process. Character, like a rock, once worn away, cannot be replaced.

Think of your position in the community, if you would be satisfied with it for yourself surely you would want something better for your wife. Back doors are open to you but no front ones.

Women love men they don't respect but the quality of it is bitter, not sweet. No man wants the woman he loves to despise him. With anxiety for his own safety and anxiety for your wife's affection, with corner of your heart is saved for the sweet security that is love's best attribute?

I'm not holding a brief for or against prohibition; I am reminding you that the law is on our statute books and we must observe it or take the consequences. Being a bootlegger, you are in the wrong. The bootlegger invariably gets the raw end of the deal. The very men who are his customers convict him and send him to jail and if he expects further business, when he gets out, he dares not vent his indignation by giving them away.

Yes, you say, it takes grit to be a bootlegger. I acknowledge that but grit in the chicken's crate is useless unless he has something else in there to be ground up by the grit. There is not much in your crew, young man, else you wouldn't be offering marriage, with such a slight security, to a girl you say you love.

Courage is a beautiful virtue, physical and moral courage, but it is not to be confused with foolhardy fearlessness.

The real test of your courage and your love as well as your willingness to quit this dirty business is a dead job and wait until you have become established in it before you ask the girl to marry you. In the end you won't lose as much time from money-making as you would if you continued in the present job and "did your time."

ONE KILLED, 4 HELD IN KIDNAPING PLOT

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 5.—(AP)—One man was killed and five faced grand jury action today, as a result of the kidnaping of Leon Cleckman, St. Paul businessman and politician. Four of the men, Sam Cimin, Anthony Scandale, Joseph Jurley and Alfred Talercio, were arrested yesterday after the finding of the body of Frank La Pre, who Chief of Police Thomas Brown said was a member of the kidnapers' band. La Pre, Chief Brown said, had been killed for fear he would "double cross" the rest of the gang. Chief Brown named Cimin as the slayer.

Chicago Tops Gotham in Divorces; Atlanta Leads Nation in Widows

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—(AP)—In at least one important count Chicago surpasses New York—the number of persons divorced.

A census bureau tally today showed 17,288 new, 22,532 women in the divorced ranks in the midwest metropolis, a 39,820 total as against New York's 28,071—10,677 men, 17,394 women.

New York's population of marriageable age totaled 5,242,262 as against Chicago's 2,562,984, a clear indication that the lower number of divorces in the larger city was not governed by the law of averages, but by New York's stringent divorce law.

In turn, Chicago's high mark was almost equaled by Los Angeles with 39,370 divorces in a marriageable age group of 1,567,940 than that of Chicago.

Philadelphia, with a marriageable age population of 1,464,560 as against Los Angeles' 995,046 had 29,443 fewer divorces. Detroit, with 1,140,560 of marriageable age, had 19,904 divorces as against Philadelphia's 9,927.

The highest percentage of widowed women was in Atlanta, Ga., 17.2; the lowest in Flint, Mich., 7.3.

Of all 48,000 cities of more than 100,000 population, Manhattan borough, New York, had the largest percentage of single men, 44.5 per cent of the marriageable.

The highest percentage of married men, 60.3, was in Wichita, Kas., the lowest, 48.9, in San Francisco. The highest percentage of married women was 71.1, in Flint, Mich.; the lowest, 47.6, in Cambridge, Mass.

How to Lose Fat a Pound a Day on a Full Stomach

Do Just These Two Simple Things—Fat Melts Away

NO tiring exercise, no starvation. Instead, a full stomach and never a hungry moment! Yet fat melts away. You can easily lose from four to seven pounds weekly, see the coarse lines of fat replaced by the refined lines of slenderness—and feel better than you ever felt before in your life.

WHAT YOU DO

There are just two simple things you do: Clear your system and keep it clear of waste matter, toxins and depleting poisons with ordinary JAD SALTS obtainable at any drug store. Start with a teaspoonful in a full glass of water tomorrow morning—a sparkling and pleasant drink.

Then EAT YOUR FILL—as much as your appetite can stand—of meals consisting of the following foods:

At breakfast eat two oranges, or the juice of two oranges. Eat also two slices of toasted whole wheat

You'll be more active, more vigorous than perhaps for years. Your friends will soon begin to notice your increasing slenderness. You'll soon avoid the embarrassment of being called fat or bulky. And you'll do it with NEVER A HUNGRY MOMENT!

If in doubt about this safe and simple way, ASK ANY DOCTOR. Show him this article. Ask him whether or not it is safe and sure. It marks the latest findings of scientific men in the field of weight reduction. For it performs two necessary and important functions:

The JAD SALTS clear the bowels and system of the excessive toxins most overweight people have. "The change in diet—the FILLING OF THE STOMACH TO ITS LIMIT—with foods that turn to energy instead of fat, decreases the weight day by day. The salts build up your health. The change in food exerts the fat. Start today. Slip out this dietary and save it. Get big package of ordinary JAD SALTS for the cleansing part of the method at any drug store. A large bottle costs less than a dollar.

*Note particularly—the salts are urged purely as a poison-banishing agent—not as a reducing. The you eat now. That's easy. For with many in food does the work—

A PEPLUM RUFFLE RUNNING

A new expression of Victorian influence is noted in this current trend transparent velvet dress for formal occasions, Sunday nights and dinner wear.

An interesting new effect is gained through the dipping movement of the hip peplum ruffle at the back with bow sash.

The neckline is cut with V-shape at the back as well as at the front. The waistline is nipped with the belt.

It's really exquisite. And it takes but 4 1/4 yards of 39-inch material to make it for the 16-year size. Think of the saving.

The dress is made with a two-piece circular skirt with pointed hip yoke, and two-piece circular hip ruffle. The skirt is attached to the bodice which is fitted in the waist. It's just as simple as A, B, C.

Crepe satin and crepe marocain are charmingly suited to this model. Our fall and winter fashion magazine is ready. It contains styles for children, the miss and, of course, a most attractive selection for adults, including, slenderizing effects for stoutness. You need this presentation of fall fashions as a guide in selecting the styles you will wear in the coming season and, incidentally, you will save money by choosing your frocks from our pattern models.

ATLANTA, GA., TUESDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 6, 1931.

FIRST SPORTS EACH DAY

Coach Mehre Will Not Accompany Georgia Team to Yale Bowl ATHLETICS ARE NOW 'ON SPOT,' RICE SAYS

Burleigh Grimes, who has been a good luck piece to the Cardinals since they obtained him from Boston in a trade late in 1930, barged right into the hall of fame Monday by beating the supposedly invincible Robert Moses Grove to put the Red-birds ahead in the World Series.

This means that Burleigh Grimes will be the subject of more than a few cartoons and feature stories in which an old man with whiskers, labeled "Pop Time," is kicking a young squirt out of the office.

Burleigh Grimes is one of the veterans of the game. He is just 38 years old, but 38 is an old man's age in baseball.

At 38 the average man feels a little stiff after 18 holes of more or less mediocre golf. He thinks of his slippers and an evening at home. And so it is a bit odd to find a fellow who is going on 39 years old out there in a highly competitive business and being mighty good about it, too.

Grimes has pitched for seven major league clubs, and for all of them he has rendered yeoman service. He is an old Southern leaguer, among other things, having toiled for the Lookouts and the Barons.

This is his 18th season in organized baseball. He started with Ottumwa in the old Central league in 1913. In June he was sold.

And what did Detroit pay for the fellow who, 18 years later, pitched one of the greatest World Series games in history? Just $400. The depression may be on but try to buy old Burleigh for that amount now.

Burleigh was in the American league just long enough to get a cup of coffee, as the boys say. He was traded to Chattanooga in the Southern league, going as part payment for Stan Coveleskie, the tall Pole. Birmingham took him from Chattanooga, and he finished the 1914 season with Richmond, in the Virginia league. Birmingham had him again through 1915 and 1916, selling him to Pittsburgh for players in the fall.

Let these statistics bore you, we will hasten: Burleigh toiled with the Pirates through the 1917 season, and was traded to Brooklyn. He worked for the Dodgers through the 1926 season, after which he was traded to New York for Vic Aldridge. Pittsburgh had him again in 1928 and 1929. In 1930 he was with Boston, and it was late in 1930 that Gabby Street needed some pitching strength.

Burleigh Grimes was obtained in a trade which went down as one of the shrewdest of the year. With Grimes pitching winning ball, the Cardinals won the pennant.

And now we've caught up with yesterday. Burleigh has one eccentricity. He never shaves the day before pitching nor the day he pitches. Only five other pitchers have pitched two-hit games in the World Series games. Waite Hoyt did it in 1921. And until Burleigh Grimes did it Monday, the feat had gone begging for a master.

And so stand by for a lot of stories about "Old Pop Time" being served instead of Youth. To those who are 38 it may be an inspiration to go out and whack the old golf ball with more vim and vigor. Old Burleigh has shown that competition is the life of the athletes.

COACH HARRY MEHRE MAY MISS GAME.
The sympathy of the entire south goes with Harry Mehre, head coach at Georgia, as he hurries home today to the bedside of his father, who is critically ill at the family home in Huntington, Ind.

Mehre worked Monday with his team, which faces the hardest test of the season Saturday at New Haven, and leaves from Atlanta this morning. It is possible that he will not be able to be with his team Saturday. Mehre has made himself one of the most popular men in the state. And the hopes and sympathy of all Georgians will be with him and his family.

SPORTS DAY AT THE FAIR.
Mc L. K. Starr, one of the better publicity men, seems about to put the Southeastern fair over big despite the fact that it is a poor year for fairs.

Today is "Sports Day" at the fair. An attractive program has been arranged which includes boxing matches, golf driving contests and other athletic feats. The smell of cooking hot dogs and hamburgers is almost worth going out to the fair. When to this is added a sports program of real excellence, together with the usual exhibits, the fair becomes downright attractive.

NATIONAL DOG WEEK.
This being National Dog Week, it is fitting to observe that in Atlanta a sanction dog show is planned for next Saturday night at 238 Peachtree street, and that nationally important things are occurring in dogdom.

At a recent Long Island show, Colonel Robert Gugenheim, who judged at the Atlanta Kennel show last spring, refused to pass on a Boston terrier because it had "too much make-up" on.

Several other states are about to pass anti-cropping laws. It is possible, indeed probable, that within a few years the American Kennel Club may do something about it.

Both items of news seem to be correct. There is too much artificiality in the showing of some dogs. Use of chalk, pomade and polish gives a dog an unnatural appearance. And the cropping of ears, to meet a fad, is sure to pass out, as more and more states pass laws prohibiting it.

The sanction show Saturday night will be an interesting event. To those seeking something different in the way of entertainment, the show is recommended. Provided, of course, you like dogs.

BULLDOGS MAKE YALE INVASION WITHOUT MEHRE

Illness of Father Takes Him Away From Football Team.

By Dillon Graham, Associated Press Sports Writer.

ATHENS, Ga., Oct. 5.—(AP)—The directing hand of Head Coach Harry Mehre will be missing this week as Georgia prepares for the football game with Yale at New Haven Saturday.

Mehre received word today of the serious illness of his father and planned to leave early tomorrow for his old home in Indiana. He supervised the Bulldogs' first workout this afternoon since the Virginia Polytechnic victory Saturday and lectured to the players tonight. He leaves the squad in care of Backfield Coach Rex Enright and hopes to rejoin it at New Haven prior to the game Saturday.

The big, ruddy-faced coach does not think his absence will hurt Georgia's chances against the Elis. "We've got our program all worked out. There'll be no rough stuff—we don't want anyone hurt. Enright and H. J. Stegman, director of athletics, will handle the Tuesday and Wednesday practice."

There was much pep and ginger in the workout today behind canvas-covered walls surrounding Sanford field, which Georgia dedicated with a win over Yale in 1929.

Captain Austin Downes, the slim quarterback, who lugged a kickoff back 80 yards for a touchdown against Yale last year, was in fine spirits. He was telling encouragement to his players as they wheeled through offensive formations.

The warm, summer sun was bearing down in all its June glory this afternoon. Linemen were puffing and sweating after bucking the dummy machine a couple of times and five minutes of punt chasing left the backfielders wet with perspiration.

The feeling of the team was expressed by one husky charger: "Up at Yale they're saying 'Harvard is the only team to beat us three straight,' but after Saturday they'll change their tune."

Mehre is worried about the Yale game. "They're going to be plenty hard," he said. "Steg saw them play Maine last week and he says they're better than last year. But Harry has confidence in his own veteran team."

Here Stegman approached and roused for Harry's fears. "Yale is much further advanced now than we were at this time last year. They have their new system working better than I had expected. But they have a lot of coaches and two practices a day mean a lot."

The Georgians will entrain here Wednesday night and arrive in New Haven the following morning. A last practice is planned for Friday afternoon in the big bowl.

Yale Prepares For Bulldogs

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 5.—(AP) The Yale varsity football team today had a light workout with individual instruction and position work in preparation for the game with Georgia next Saturday. The linemen, under Coach Adams Walsh, who scouted Georgia last Saturday, were given a defensive workout. Walsh revealed to the press that Georgia has a powerful team. The backs had a long forward pass drill under Benny Friedman, but no scrimmage was held. The team was ordered to report for a secret scrimmage in the Yale bowl tomorrow.

John Killeen, of New York city, who was promoted to the position of tackle on the varsity squad today. He is a member of the Eli track team and a heavyweight boxer. Few Tysens, left guard, who sustained a wrenched knee in the Maine game, will not be able to play against Georgia. Coach Mal Stevens announced that the position will be filled either by Al Strange or Sauer, he said.

Bulldogs Work For Yale Game

By Al Smith.

ATHENS, Ga., Oct. 5.—Clad in a pair of those mustard-colored football pants and with a brown hat perched jauntily on his head, Harry Mehre, who coaches football over here, stood on Sanford field this afternoon and watched his Bulldogs take their first workout in preparation for the annual battle with Yale in the bowl Saturday.

Just a moment before he had told his players a little of what they faced Saturday. Yale, tired of two years of subjugation to the southern Bulldogs, is pointing for Georgia more than ever. Then, too, word had come in from Coach H. J. Stegman and Line Coach Ted Trower, who scouted at Yale Saturday, that the Bulldogs have a stronger team this fall.

And so, the Bulldogs worked determinedly for two hours and then some, polishing up on some of their weak points they displayed in Saturday's game with V. P. I.

Far from going slow on the line, the Bulldogs speeded up a little bit. They have but two more days to prepare for their battle with Yale, and they needed all they could get in this afternoon.

Some of the squad bore wound stripes around today. A few of the linemen had bandages on their arms and hands, evidences that Virginia's Gobblers were no milkops when it comes to mixing things up on the line, and several of the backs displayed a few bruises from excessively hard contacts with mother earth Saturday afternoon. None of the "injuries" are serious enough to incapacitate the Bulldogs, however.

"Yale has a much better team this season than they had last fall," said H. J. Stegman, director of athletics, following practice this afternoon. "They have a strong corps of backs."

DICK DAVIS COURT IN GREAT SHAPE

Following Long Rest, Veteran Faces Cy Williams Here Wednesday.

Big, burly Dick Daviscourt is back in the wrestling wars. The big fellow couldn't stay out. After two months of training in Arizona, he rid himself of a bad shoulder and came back. Matchmaker Henry Weber signed him for Atlanta and he appears Wednesday night. Williams, the former Florida football star, will meet Daviscourt in what Weber expects to be one of the best matches he has put on here so far as action and thrills are concerned. "Williams is a strong, young fellow with better than an average knowledge of the science of the game," said Weber. "He will be shooting the works against Daviscourt because it is his big chance to show that he can win in main event matches. Daviscourt is still tough and strong. Atlanteans know that. He is a real stumbling block. Should Williams beat him, it would be a real feat for his cap."

DICK FAVORED.
"Daviscourt will be a slight favorite, I guess," said Weber, "because he knows so much more. But I know that Williams will tear into him like a tiger, and make the match one of the hardest Dick ever had." Weber further revealed that Daviscourt had put himself in the best shape of his career by two months of rest and light training in Arizona. "Dick promoter a few weeks ago told me to make expenses," said Weber, "but all the while he was seeing if he could get rid of some trouble he had with his arm. He is a great fellow who has never let himself be beaten. He is able to keep on beating most of the top-notchers."

MARVIN TO SHOW

The son of the late Marvin, the night officer Chief Tom Marvin, the Osage Indian whose chin lock has come to be greatly feared, against Charley Lehman, the wild Texan. Lehman and Marvin are both primitive men by instinct, and their match will probably have the ladies hiding their eyes and shuddering. Matchmaker Henry Weber asks that all those attending the bouts be sure to get their automobile tickets. Tickets to the match are on sale at the Piedmont Hatters and at the Candler Building Soda Company. Ladies will be admitted to any seat for $1.

Florida Grid Star Dies From Injury

LAKELAND, Fla., Oct. 5.—(AP)—Oakley Shoup, 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Manney Shoup, of Lakeland Highlands suburb, died in a local hospital Sunday from injuries received in a football game last Tuesday. His spine was injured.

Y-Church Teams Form Court Loop

Fourteen of the 24 berths in the basketball leagues of the Y-Church A. A. were filled at the meeting held Monday night at the Y. M. C. A. promising early completion of all leagues. The three leagues will be the Dixie, Seawee and Georgia. Only two more teams can secure places. Those seeking to enter should send representation to next Monday's meeting. The playing season will start the week of November 16 and will consist of 21 games per team.

Athletic Club Opens Best Winter Season

Competitive Athletics Abolished, Every Advantage Is Offered Members.

By Ralph McGill.

With winter greens planted at East Lake, and with the city club's athletic quarters completely renovated, the Atlanta Athletic Club has embarked on what should be the greatest winter season in its history.

Under the new plan, announced some time ago, the club has abandoned competitive athletics and will devote its entire attention to building up intra-club activities.

The Atlanta Athletic Club offers more facilities than any other club in the United States. The athletic equipment, which includes five handball courts, volleyball courts, swimming pool and other equipment, is available for members from 9 o'clock each morning until 7 in the evening.

"We are the only club with golf courses at the country club," said Scott Hudson, Monday night in discussing the club's winter plans. "Few athletic clubs have a country club."

"The winter greens have been planted, and will be ready for our members when the summer greens are closed. Golf continues to be popular. The hot weather evidently kept some of them back, as last Sunday saw the largest number of golfers in East Lake's history playing. More than 300 golfers, including some 50 guests, played on the two courses Sunday."

Classes have been organized for ladies this winter. They are held every day, except Saturday and Sunday, from 9:45 to 10:30 each morning.

Men's classes begin at 11:30 and continue on through the afternoon. It is possible for the first business man to leave his office and get exercise in the gymnasium or swimming in the pool at any hour of the day.

Joe Bean reports that the ladies' classes are very popular. Joe, however, discreetly refrains from mentioning just how many pounds are lost in the classes. But pounds are lost. Sons of members have free swimming and gymnasium instruction each Saturday morning from 9:30 to 10:30.

"We are going to attempt to arrange club billiard tournaments, membership competition in handball and volleyball," said Al Doonan, chairman of the athletic committee.

"Our membership is growing. We are going to attempt to interest members in their health. Every year men come to Atlanta and sell physical culture which members of this club get by their membership. We have decided that, by abandoning basketball and other sports, we will be able to give our members more attention."

Although the Riverside game is commanding the attention of the coaches and players, Tech High officials are looking forward to the night game October 14 with Erie academy, at Spiller field. Preparations are being made to care for a record crowd.

Tickets for the Erie battle, the last of the night games for Tech High, were placed on sale Monday morning at Zachry's on Peachtree street.

Paul Waner's Foul May Cost Cubs Yet

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—(AP)—A foul ball from the hat of Paul Waner, Pittsburgh Pirate outfielder, may cost the Chicago Cubs some money. The foul ball, which landed in the stands, was caught by a fan. The Cubs are scheduled to play the Pirates at Pittsburgh Saturday and yesterday got three singles.

MURRAY SIGNS

Bob Murray already has been signed to manage the Richmond club of the Eastern league for 1932.

TWO TAKE LEAD IN SENIOR PLAY

Monroe and Bridges Score 89's for Honors on Monday.

A. H. (Gus) Monroe and H. L. Bridges, with a pair of 89s, took the lead Monday in the qualifying rounds for Atlanta's first annual seniors' golf tournament on the Capital City Country Club course. Milton Dargan Sr. won second honors with a 90 and W. M. Stafford was third with a 93.

Qualifying will continue today with every citizen of the city past 50 years of age eligible and invited to participate.

The tournament is being sponsored by the newly organized Atlanta Golf Association, with the co-operation of officials and members of the Capital City Country Club.

Players will be grouped into flights of eight each and the defeated four in each group will form a consolation flight and continue play. There will be prizes for the winner and runner-up in each flight.

Prize for the tournament will be made tonight, following the completion of qualifying and match play will start Wednesday. Two days will be given over to each round of play.

Participants in the tournament will include M. E. Bodenheimer (98), W. C. Slaughter (101), Walter Whittington (101), and H. W. Foushee (115).

Among those expected to participate today are Colonel Leroy Arnold, dean of southern amateur golf; R. P. Jones (Bobby's father), Colonel Westmoreland and others.

Women Play Tournery Today

A "white elephant" golf tournament will be held this morning on the East Lake Country Club course. It is being sponsored by the Atlanta Women's Golf Association and will be the last competitive golf before the annual women's state tournament next week at Sea Island, Ga.

Every entry is requested to bring a prize of some sort, assuring every player of a prize.

The winner will have first choice at the wrapped packages, with the second low scorer, second choice and so on.

Grimm Gives Cubs Victory Over Sox

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Captain Charley Grimm, climaxing his greatest year with the Chicago Cubs, gave them a thrilling 3-2 victory over the White Sox in the sixth game of the city series today when he doubled in the ninth inning to score the tying and winning runs.

Two more outs were all the White Sox needed to become champions of Chicago. The seventh and deciding game will be played tomorrow.

Preparations Made For Festival Shoot

Extensive preparations are being made by the Capital Gun Club for the fall festival invitation trap shoot scheduled to start Wednesday on the club traps at Center Hill.

The shoot will continue through Saturday morning with 800 targets on the four-day program.

GRIMES DEFEATS MACKMEN, 5-2, AND CARDS LEAD

George Earnshaw A's Only Hope To Halt Fighting Red Birds.

By Grantland Rice.

(Copyright, 1931, for The Constitution by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.) PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5.—One deep trouble with the Athletics is the fact that they read verse and believe what they read.

Before the third game of the World Series, in the august presence of President Hoover and his party, they had just come across this line from an old poem: "Old Grimes is dead, that good old man," when they woke up and discovered that old Grimes was about as dead as two Bengal tigers in the Indian jungle, a king cobra, an African lion on his native reeds, Max Baer, boxing and the Notre Dame football team.

Grimes had them shut out with one pale blue single when there were two out in the ninth. Then Cochrane walked, and Simmons smacked another homer, but as it was Grimes beat the famous Grove, 5 to 2, and drove the Mackmen back into a hole that is about as shiny and radiant as mid-night in a railroad tunnel.

ON THE RAGED EDGE

With the fourth game coming on, Old Man Grimes and his mates shored the double world's champions of 1929 and 1930 to the edge of the precipice, and if George Earnshaw can't stop the Cardinal charge in this fourth game they might as well jump off and end the agon.

Grimes waited 15 years to pitch one of the greatest games of his career. While Pepper Martin, the Oklahoma sinner, and his Cardinal mates were clawing the hide off Robert Moses Grove and piling up hit after hit and run after run, Grimes stepped into the eighth inning before he allowed the enemy anything that looked like half a hit.

BING WAKES UP

It was not until the eighth inning that Bing Miller became the first of the Athletics to discover that Old Man Grimes was far from being dead, and that something had to be done about it. It was at this hopeless spot that Bing Miller delivered the first hit off the veteran who had been verified as a corpse in the famous poem.

The revised version should have read: "If Grimes is dead, all lightning bolts are softer than puff powder jolts; If Grimes is dead, a ten-inch shell can hardly make your forehead swell."

If Grimes is dead, I'd like to be another corpse by land or sea."

The famous veteran lost two five-hit games a year ago. He pitched two great battles, and all he received in the way of a reward was a rewording of each ear. On this last occasion, he made up his mind that, if five-hit games couldn't win, he would take the slugging Athletics by the napes of their sun-kissed necks and see what two scattered hits would do.

As a result he pitched one of the greatest of all world series games, ending up a trifle down the stretcher when his team had the double champions locked in the closet with the laundry bag.

MARTIN AGAIN!

But while Grimes was at the peak, it fell to the lot of Pepper Martin to lead the Cardinal offense for the third time in three starts. The Oklahoma explosion started the two hitting rallies that removed most of Grove's scalp before the contest had passed the third inning.

You could see from the astonished expression on Mr. Hoover's face that he had never seen anything quite like Pepper Martin. The president undoubtedly had heard of this celebrated Oklahoma high explosive, but he

SANCTION SHOW FOR DOGS HERE SATURDAY NIGHT

Atlanta Kennel Club Sponsors Show for Non-Ribbon Winners.

Dog owners of Atlanta will have an opportunity Saturday night to have their dogs looked over by expert judges in a sanction show sponsored by the Atlanta Kennel Club. The show will be held at 228-240 Peachtree street.

The sanction shows are open only to dogs that have not won a ribbon in a championship show. They afford an invaluable opportunity for a dog owner to have his dog looked over, and gain some knowledge of what sort of dog he has so far as what class is concerned.

Members of the Kennel Club will not enter their own dogs. This will leave the show open to newcomers who will be the big feature of National Dog Week, which is being observed here this week.

Judges for the show will be A. G. Laughridge, Frank Coffee and R. V. McRoberts. The dogs will be divided into two groups, those over a year old and those under one year.

A sanction show was held last fall and many good show dogs were developed from it, some of them winning prizes in the championship show held in the spring.

The Atlanta Kennel Club is doing a great work in developing dogs for Atlanta and Georgia. The sanction show will be the big feature of National Dog Week, which is being observed here this week.

Entries may be filed with Laughridge at Jackson 3195, or may be left with the sports department of The Constitution for delivery to the officials. Those who have not time to announce entries may bring the dogs to the show room on Peachtree street Saturday afternoon and leave them.

There is no formality about a sanction show except in the judging, which is careful and expert.

Morehouse Works For Allen Gridders

The Maroon Tigers, of Morehouse College, runners-up to the champions in the Southeastern conference last year, will face an acid test in Allen University, of Columbia, S. C., Friday afternoon, when they open the 1931 football season on the athletic field of the local institution.

Preparation is under way at the Maroon camp this week. Fundamentals of blocking and tackling are being stressed by the Morehouse mentors.

Ray Vaughn, former eastern star, is entering his third year as Morehouse coach, and is assisted by "Tomstone" Forbes, one of Morehouse College's greatest athletes.

A light scrimmage will be held tomorrow, and it is expected that the Allen plays will be used against the varsity by the reserves. The varsity backfield, composed of Kelly, all-southern quarterback last year; Edmonds and Jeffries at halves, and Jones at fullback, will give the Morehouse outfit one of the best backfields in the south this fall.

Grimes Hurls Great Win In Pain

By Gayle Talbot, Associated Press Sports Writer.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5.—(AP)—It was the eighth inning, the Cardinals were at bat, and outside the crowd that filled Shibe park was yelling for the blood of Big Burleigh Grimes. Up to that time he had allowed their beloved Athletics one lone hit, and he had been truculent in his attitude.

The crowd saw in Grimes a man who was moving down the home boys with remarkable precision and doing his level best to keep a third straight world title from coming to Philadelphia. Out there in the sunlight, in other words, Grimes was a villain hatching the darkest of plots.

Down in the dim light of the passageway that led to the Cardinals' dugout there was an entirely different Grimes. He stood there, almost crying, as the husky trainer of the National League champions grasped him about the chest from behind and squeezed him until something cracked.

Then he scrambled back out there, tears in his eyes and fighting mad, determined to pitch that last inning. There was a close play on a Cardinal at first base. The umpire called him out and you could hear Grimes above all else as he told the arbiter what he thought of the decision. He was fighting back, but he would not give either the Athletics or the crowd the satisfaction of realizing his plight.

There was a happy scene in the Cardinals' dressing room as they gathered about Grimes and pumped his hand, but there wasn't a slap on his back. They were jubilant, they were shouting, but they were not shouting at him. They were shouting at the Athletics, who they would finish the Athletics without the formality of going back to St. Louis.

"I know I could take those guys," chortled Grimes. "They beat me twice last year when I had them all wrapped up, but they couldn't do it today. Yeah, I'd liked to have pitched a no-hitter. Sure. But I made the mistake of trying to slip a fast one by Bink Miller in the eighth, and that was that. Simmons got hold of one high and outside in the ninth."

Grimes Is Added To Famous Group

SHIBE PARK, PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Burleigh Grimes in pitching the sixth two-hit game in world's series history, put himself in this company:

1906, October 11: Ed Walsh, Chicago White Sox vs. Chicago Cubs, 3-0.

1906, October 12: Mordecai Brown, Cubs vs. White Sox, 1-0.

1912, October 11: Eddie Plank, Athletics vs. New York Giants, 3-1.

1914, October 10: Bill James, Boston Braves vs. Athletics, 1-0.

1921, October 6: Waite Hoyt, Yankees vs. Giants, 3-0.

1931, October 5: Burleigh Grimes, Cardinals vs. Athletics, 5-2.

MARTIN, GRIMES WERE TOO GOOD, COLLINS SAYS

Card Hurler's Batting as Valuable as Pitching in Third Game.

By Eddie Collins, Captain of the Athletics.

(Copyright, 1931, for The Constitution by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.) PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5.—When any club comes to your own back yard and gives you as neat a trimming as the Cards handed to us today I ask you, is there much to say?

I might go into minute details and try to explain how so and so was out of position, this ball or that was pitched wrong, and how this St. Louis man or this one was lucky to hit safely, but I don't feel like doing that. I think Burleigh Grimes deserves all the credit in the world for going in and pitching a whole of a game, and we are not going to try to slobber a thing, but are ready and willing to hand it to him.

Any pitcher who can hold our crowd to two hits must be good. Not only did he limit us to a couple of hits, but we didn't even hit the ball hard. Possibly the only exception to this was when Miller did get hold of one ball. Sparky Adams handled it so well that it counted for nothing.

This was the play in which Adams hit his ankle again, and was forced to retire.

Grove was hit hard and often. That is unusual for him. But in order for him to win today, he would have had to strike out about two dozen of the Cards, the way we were hitting.

Offensively, again it was Pepper Martin who upset the works against us.

WALK COSTLY.

Grove's only base on balls started him off bad when he walked Jim Bottomley, and then Martin put on his act by singling to center. Hit by Wilson and Gehlbach followed that and netted two runs.

Two innings later Haefy singled and then Martin again—you can't keep him off those bases—plastered one that looked like it was going to clear the right-field wall. It did not, however, and by skillfully playing the rebound off the cement, Haas was able to hold the hit to a double.

This put Haefy on third, and Martin on second, and nobody out. Then Grove really did his best work. Wilson hit feebly to the infield and Gehlbach fanned. This brought up Grimes.

Now I am not going to say that Lefty pitched poorly to St. Louis, but he did let up or held him too cheaply, because he did not. Nevertheless, Grimes singled cleanly to right field, scoring the two runs, and I firmly believe, winning the ball game on this very hit.

BIG DIFFERENCE.

If he had come out of this inning without St. Louis making a run it would have made it an entirely different game.

A's "On Spot" Now, Rice Says

By Grantland Rice.

probably is willing to admit that only a third or a fourth had been told. Here are just two examples.

In the second inning Bottomley worked Grove for a pass. Haefy answered out, and then the Athletics went to walk up with Pepper Martin? Not another soul. Even a hostile Philadelphia crowd stood up and cheered the Athletics live when he came to bat with a record of 5 hits in 7 times at bat.

GROVE JARRED.

In the face of this ovation Pepper poured a low single to center field, driving Bottomley to third base. That was the blow that jarred the soul out of Grove.

Wilson's single scored Bottomley and sent the dashing Martin on to third, where he scored on Gehlbach's outfield fly. Two runs and Pepper in the midst of both.

Then there was the fourth inning. Haefy singled and this time, with two strikes called against him, Martin went to bat. He doubled up on the top of the right-center fence. Grimes then scored both men with a single after two were out, and at this point Grove was hit hard and often.

Flowers walked and Bottomley hit a long double, but it wasn't needed.

RAINBOW OUTLOOK.

As this season's history the Cardinal outlook is now full of rainbow tints. They have beaten Earnshaw and Grove in two successive games, and they still believe Derringer will show them something else in spite of an over-reliance on his arm.

Fortunately, Derringer doesn't pitch with his nose. He uses his right arm almost exclusively for this purpose, and they can't hit him much harder than the Cardinals have hit Grove up to date.

The defensive play in the third game of the series was of the highest possible order. There may have been a belief on both teams that Mr. Hoover was fond of the circus. They gave him every detail of circus work, from the hard blue seats and the pink lemons to the elephants and the side-show.

Jimmy Dykes dived for a line-drive from Chick Haefy's bat and caught it as he stood on one ear. Later on, he hit a line-drive to right field, and then Frank Frisch, fell to both knees and then threw the Fordham flash out at first.

FRISCH'S REVENGE.

Frisch, in return, ran back and leaped high into the steady summer air for a line-drive by Cramer, and then he hit a line-drive to right field, and then he hit a line-drive to right field, and then he hit a line-drive to right field.

So far this series has yielded only one error, and that came on a freak play by Cramer Wilson. Both outfielders and infielders have been superb.

But in the last two games the Cardinals' attack has been kept on a harder, far more full of flame and fight. And in the last two games the Cardinals' pitching has bordered on the superb.

SLUGGERS QUELLED.

Hallahan and Grimes have held one of the greatest of all slugging ball teams to five hits in 18 innings—five hits and two runs. You can't beat that pitching—can you? You can't beat that pitching—can you? You can't beat that pitching—can you?

When Pepper Martin finished his second time at bat in the game today he was only batting .777. Later on he slumped to .636 for the series, which is something of an affront to his proud nature. He has seven hits and four runs in the three games, not overlooking three stolen bases.

Martin, Hallahan and Grimes are the big stars so far, and they all register from the club.

For the first time in three years the Athletics are on the spot. They will need everything they have to escape the fusillade that seems to be waiting.

Emory Candidates Prepare for Game

Emory University football field was packed with football aspirants Monday afternoon, all four teams being represented among those who were sent on getting in some good, hard practice for the first game, which is scheduled for Saturday morning with the sophomores and juniors as opponents.

Harvey Hill, ex-Georgia luminary, made his first appearance on the field in the role of sophomore coach. He gave the sophomores extensive drill in pass receiving and attempted to teach the elements of a few Notre Dame plays. Jeff McCord, new director of Emory's athletic affairs, and Coach Hill with the sophomore line.

The juniors were put through their paces by Coach Jimmy Lester. Jimmie had his boys running foot races, returning punts and catching passes, no heavy work being attempted.

The freshmen, under the tutelage of coaches J. B. Green and Douglas Elliott, were working part in heavier work. Coach Green had the freshmen backs returning punts, and running plays, while Coach Elliott was putting the linemen through dummy tackling practice. None of the teams have held a regular scrimmage yet.

The freshmen coaches have a squad of some 50 or 60 players from which to pick their team, and it is expected that the first-year men will come through in fine style in the Emory tournament.

Coach McCord announced Monday that the same scoring system that was used last year will be used again this year, one point being awarded for each first down. The first game will begin at 9:30 Saturday morning.

WINS BY RALLY.

GRIMES WAS DUE FOR GREAT GAME, FRISCH WRITES

Burleigh Told Mates Before Game He Would Beat Athletics.

By Frankie Frisch, Captain and Second Baseman of the Cardinals, in His Seventh World Series.

(Copyright, 1931, for The Constitution by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.) PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5.—We certainly were full of confidence before we went into the contest today. Grimes told us before the game he was "right," and he was by the way he warmed up.

He was serious at first, but after about five minutes he began to take it lightly. He had every thing. And when he came over to the bench just before the start he smiled through that heavy beard and we were sure he had picked the right man in the right spot.

The game today, by the way, is the second two-hit game I've played in the World Series. The last time I was on the losing side. That was back in 1921 when I was with the Giants and Waite Hoyt, then with the Yankees.

Too bad Grimes could not go through with a no-hitter, but even so, it's all the same in the standing. We've got it on the A's now. We are game ahead of them and we have the advantage, I think, in pitching for tomorrow. They probably will come back with Earnshaw, and I guess Street will use Hadden, who beat Earnshaw last Friday. Street may send back Derringer, though Paul has been laid up with a sore nose. He was in bed all day today.

CARDS CONFIDENT.

We knew we could beat Grove to day. We felt as confident of that as we did of Grimes' ability to stop the Athletics. We hit Grove hard last Thursday and we beat him a game last year. Before today's game we were hoping Connie Mack would send us a new pitcher.

So you can imagine how good we felt when Grove went out to warm up.

I think Grimes might have had a shakedown for the ball by Haas that Burleigh stopped with his bare hand in the ninth inning. His hand was all red when I rubbed it, and it probably prevented him from gripping the ball the way he wanted to for the rest of the inning. However, that's not an alibi.

"I'm satisfied," Burleigh told me as we rushed to the clubhouse. "It doesn't matter how many runs they got just so we beat them. I want to thank you fellows for the fine batting and fielding help you gave me. It was great."

FIRST TIME AHEAD.

You can picture us in that clubhouse, and we were ahead in one of the World Series for several years and there certainly was a great deal of handshaking and hearty slaps on the back. We're so happy now we see an early victory in the series. We may go back to St. Louis to decide it but I have my doubts about that. All the boys are eager to go to the series over as quickly as possible.

If we keep on hitting and fielding behind such fine pitching as we've been getting, we'll win the title here in Philadelphia. Our hitting today was just the right tonic in back of Grimes' pitching. Almost everybody hit safely. The big attack came from the lower part of the batting order.

Pepper Martin again was the big shot. He started us on the way with his single, the first hit off Grove in the second inning, and then he doubled to get the hit double in the midst of the rally that brought up two more runs. That gave him seven hits in three games, making him the big batting hero of the series.

HIS BAT HELPED.

Grimes himself was a big batting factor in his own victory with that single. When he drove in those two runs in the fourth we were positive we could not lose. Haefy, Jimmy Wilson, Gehlbach and Bottomley were the other fellows who came through in our attack.

I asked Grimes after the game what he used mostly in his pitching, and he told me he felt so good generally with his stuff that he mixed 'em up plenty, giving the Athletics a look at everything. They knew it, too, being held hitless for seven innings.

We greatly admire the Athletics for staying right in there to the final out, battling all the way, but we feel we are a better ball club now and that they can't stop us.

Crippled 'Gators Hold Mild Session

Question Marks Changed To Exclamation Points At Athens Saturday

By Jimmy Jones.

The atmosphere at Athens, Ga., was literally filled with question marks before that football game last Saturday between Georgia and the Virginia Polytechnic Institute. There was even a great big question mark in the mind of Harry Mehre, the Bulldog coach.

Mr. Mehre was obviously disturbed by the utter serenity with which the press was viewing the contest, and determined to counteract the optimism. So, looking sternly at his circle of listeners like a reproachful professor surveying a very unimpressive class, Mr. Mehre announced solemnly that he would be tickled to death to win by a touchdown.

Later, upon being accused of being conventionally gloomy, Harry reluctantly admitted his team might score two touchdowns, but he determined to "fear V. P. I." right up to kick-off time.

And the question marks persisted in the minds of the laymen. Wasn't V. P. I. one of these mysterious teams from the northern corner of the conference that occasionally carried surprise packages on visits to the neighbors?

Would Austle Downes, the gilded little geezer who plays quarterback, be the same Austle after that sprained arm?

Adel Jack (The Ripper) Roberts carry the same old drive? And what about Marion Dickens since he had had his tonsils removed?

Batchelor, what manner of center was he?

The game started, and instead of question marks, there were exclamations. The Bulldogs ran their plays perfectly. Roberts and Dickens sprang through the Gobblers like the tongue of a forest fire licking at a dry brush heap. Some thought Dickens to be improved. Certainly the Ocella wiggler ran with lots of power.

A hot tip from a well known football man just returned from the east, says that Mehre's Southern Bulldogs should hang up their victory over the Blue Sat. The consensus of neutrals who saw the Yale game were not impressed with the latter's mastery of his offense and seem to think Georgia farther advanced.

Harry Mehre is confronted with a lack of tackle reserves, however, that the average coach of a strong team is not troubled with. Hamrick and Rose are capable enough but the reserves in this department are far from being on a par with those of the Bulldogs. Ted Townsend, line coach, is working hard with Penn. Townsend and Cooper, new but willing material.

Batchelor admitted that Rex Enright had done a fine job with the young backs—Whire, Key, Brown, etc. But they came to see what those Bulldogs were packing for Yale and Ed Hamm, Tech coach and former Olympic jumping champion, leading the way.

More than a dozen of the Junior Chamber golfers will enter the driving contest, the winner of which will receive a silver cup. They will attempt to drive the ball across the lake.

Wrestling and boxing will close the sports day program at 9:30 o'clock, with "Pa" Stribling and Max Abelson in the role of referees. There will be three six-round bouts, and Radcliffe, Harper, Williamson and a Klazysko are on the wrestling program.

DOCTOR WINS BOUT.

TORONTO, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Spotting his opponent, 20 minutes, Dr. Doctor, promising young heavyweight from Buffalo, N. Y., tonight outpointed Seal Harris, Memphis negro, in an eight-round bout at the Shamrock A. C. Doctor weighed 189 1/2; Harris 237 3/4.

But Mr. Mehre, who also knows his centers, saw something that Adam Walsh missed. He saw a 200-pound 6-foot boy who used to play halfback get down under the kicks almost as fast as the ends. Harry had looked ahead to that game. In spring training, he saw what he was well fixed on backs but that he did need a center. So he began working on Batchelor, teaching him all the tricks he knew about playing the position.

Saturday Harry had enough confidence in Batchelor to start him in place of Vase McWhorter, a center with more experience. The team is not a smooth passer yet, but being new to the job as well as being a sophomore, but he has those essentials of size and speed that go to make great centers.

Mehre will continue molding him into a fine workman.

Furthermore, next Saturday Mr. Mehre will trot his lefty protegee right into the Yale Bowl to play against Old Eli's best. Batchelor has never been troubled with a case of nerves.

Consequently, the Yale Bowl will be no more terrifying to the tall Texan than a sugar bowl, a finger bowl or any other kind of bowl.

Tichenor Named Official "Scout"

REYNOLDS Tichenor, well known as a leading southern football official for years, will occupy the newly-created office of "scout" for the southern football officials' association.

Tichenor's duty, it has been learned, will be to attend a leading southern game each Saturday and make a strictly confidential report on the work of the officials to the booking office at Lake Wales, Fla. He saw Saturday's game between Tech and South Carolina and his judgment was immediately put to use on a ruling by which South Carolina was given a touchdown on a pass completed beyond the end zone.

Tichenor, who was ill for some time, has worked many football games and knows the job thoroughly.

BULLDOG COACH IS CALLED HOME and a good line. Many of the players are veterans and they have shown a great improvement over their play in the fall.

Two Yale backs who pass left-handed will worry the Bulldogs considerably Saturday. Coach Stegeman says "Gators" will probably run against the strongest pass attack they've ever seen when we meet Yale. Yale's punting has improved over last fall. They have a strong team this fall, a team that will give any team in the country a bad afternoon.

"Booth ought to do great this fall," Lincolnton says. "He certainly looked great Saturday."

A full-time scrimmage will be the lot of the Bulldogs Tuesday afternoon as Harry Mehre gets them ready for their departure Wednesday night for New Haven, Conn., aboard the Red-dog special. Another scrimmage Wednesday will be the Bulldogs' work until the workout in the Yale bowl Friday afternoon.

JACKETS SERVE FAIR WARNING ON FUTURE FOES

Florida and North Carolina Also Prove Stronger Than Expected.

By Dan E. McGugin, Vanderbilt University Football Coach.

(Copyright, 1931, for The Constitution by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.) NASHVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 5.—Georgia Tech has a hard-headed way of doing the unexpected. Against South Carolina Saturday, Tech was the under-dog, but came through with a rather decisive victory.

Coach Alexander has surrounded himself with a most efficient coaching staff, including Cannon of Notre Dame, Dodd of Tennessee and others. Also, his material perhaps is better than anticipated. Tech will meet her strong conference opponents on almost even terms.

Florida, until Saturday's game, was an unknown quantity. I saw the North Carolina State-Davidson game on September 26, and State had a big, fast, hard-running football team. In defeating State, 34 to 0, Florida joins the list of the best teams in the conference.

Stories out of Gainesville have indicated that Florida, with most of her veterans gone, would be weak this year, but somehow there has been an air of complacency on the part of Florida coaches that has indicated they were not so sure.

THREE ADDED.

Heretofore Tennessee, Tulane, Alabama, Georgia and Vanderbilt have been considered the strong teams of the conference. To this list Florida and Georgia Tech must be added, and I am prepared to add North Carolina also.

Louisiana State, Kentucky and Maryland may all join this list of leaders. It is true Maryland had a close call with Virginia, but Maryland usually develops slowly but progressively.

North Carolina has a good hard-fighting football team, and might easily have tied Vanderbilt Saturday or even won had she not been seized with an epidemic of early season fumbling. Strong conference teams will find all they are looking for in North Carolina.

Branch is one of those jewels apt to break up a football game any minute. He is not only lightning-like in speed and change of direction, but he has strength of body. He will be as dangerous returning punts and kicks as any man in America this year.

Tulane was held to one touchdown by Texas A. & M., always a good Continued on Page 19.

New York Curb Exchange Transactions

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER.
NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—(The trib market was under steady pressure today. Resistance appeared here and there at times, but final prices for most of the issues represented new lows. Sales totaled 1,000,000 shares, a moderately large volume.
Utilities made a generally promising. Some oils acted better, but most of the oil issues were weak.
Local specialties were mixed.
Electric Bond & Share broke 2 cents in a substantial turnover.
Service, also actively dealt in, rose 5-8's, suggested to 51-4 and closed half a point higher. The Traction was weak at 51-2 and 2 net. Consolidated Gas of Baltimore, Commonwealth Edison and the Power ratings moved more extensively.
The Standard Oils were heavy, but Gulf and Humble were about steady.

SUGAR.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Raw sugar changed today for spots, with a range of 25,000 bags of Cuban, for export at 3.45.

The futures were generally lower, reflecting weakness in Wall Street and the demand in the spot market. Prices advanced for October, but fell for losses with the rest of the year. Sugar 3 points net lower. Total stock only 19,300 tons, and a good deal was exchanging from the near position. The October closed at 1.27; September 1.36; July 1.43; March 1.38; January 1.43.

There was no change in refined sugar. The No. 12 white granulated sold at 4.50 for fine granulated and light and a hand-to-mouth price.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Coffee futures generally lower today under liquidation of buyers and some selling said to have come from Brazil. No. 7 contracts opened at 4.00 and closed 7 to 14 lower. Santos contracts opened at 4.00 and closed 19 to 21 lower. Closing quotations: No. 7 contract 4.41; December 4.51; March 4.81; July 4.91; September 5.05. Santos contracts: October 6.58; December 6.63; May 7.03; July 7.15; September 7.25. Coffee dull. Rio 7s, 54 to 55; Santos, 74 to 75.
